No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion. Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing the merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, and in Bilious Diseases.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

SELECT MISCELLANY.

A STORY OF THE TIMES.

Or, Pay as You Go.

"Ho, hum," sighed William Taylor, as he seated himself by the stove, and propped up his head with both his hands.

He had just made the fire. It was six o'clock on a winter morning—the first day of January—and his wife had begun to get breakfast.

William Taylor was an under clerk in the office of the Bagg Corporation, a large manufacturing establishment in a New England village. He had been married about two years, but life went hard enough with him. Though he did the best he knew how to do, he could not make both ends of the year meet. It is true, he had some notions about his social standing that were not exactly in keeping with his position, and especially not with his salary, which was only three hundred dollars a year.

Dollars and cents were the most unmanageable commodities he was called upon to handle. They were slippery, and would not stay between his fingers; all he could do. He had not devoted much attention to the subject of finance and in consequence it became one of the many trials of his life.

"What is the matter, William?" asked his wife, touched with the deep sigh.

"This is pay-day," replied the husband, with another deep sigh. "... though ..."

"Miserable?"

"I am indeed."

"What, because it is pay-day?"

"Yes."

"People generally feel rejoiced at such times."

"I don't know. I have been awake half the night thinking of it."

"Why, William, why should you feel so unhappy?"

"I owe more than I can pay."

"You do?"

Ellen who was no financier, any more than her husband, had never given the subject a thought. She was not a little surprised to hear the abrupt announcement.

"I do Ellen; and I am fearful that I shall have trouble."

"What sort of trouble?" asked Ellen, frightened.

"Perhaps some one will sue me, trustee my salary, or something of that kind."

"Why did you not tell me of this before, William? I would rather live on a crust of bread and wear a calico to church, than have you unhappy, or have you sued or trusted. Will they put you in jail?" and the young wife actually trembled at the thought of such a catastrophe.

"I think not; but they may put me to a great deal of trouble."

"Why did you not tell me before?"

"I did not know it myself. Last Tuesday I made a few figures and found that I owed about one hundred and fifty dollars. My quarter's salary is only seventy-five."

"But some of them will wait. We will retrench."

"I went to Spike; but he refused to wait beyond the first of Jan."

"We have been extravagant, William."

"I am afraid we have."

"How much do you owe Spike?"

"About thirty dollars."

"Yes, such bills count up fast."

"We ought not to owe him a cent. We ought not to ride at all, though I enjoy riding very much."

"So do I, and Spike was always willing to trust me." ... "with those of whom there was any chance of getting his pay."

"I am sorry."

"I had no idea the bill was so much until he sent it in about three weeks ago."

"We must stop riding."

"It will be hard to do so. After I get done at the office, it is so pleasant to drive half-a-dozen miles; but I didn't think I had ridden so much."

"Perhaps he'll wait."

"No; he said he would not."

"What will be done?"

"I don't know."

"Can't you borrow some money?"

"Perhaps I can."

"Won't Mr. Mason lend you some? He has been very kind to you, and seems to be very much interested in you."

"I should not like to ask him."

"Why?"

"I should have to expose my affairs to him."

"I'll tell you what I'll do."

"What?"

"I will write to Aunt Hannah. You know how fond she is of me. I will ask her to lend me a hundred dollars. She is rich, and perhaps she'll give it to me."

William did not like to have her do so, but perils in his path finally induced him to consent. On the strength of the letter he could put Spike off a week or two.

There was something to hope for at least. William ate his breakfast and felt easier. He did not consider borrowing the money to pay a debt as only transferring not cancelling it. But he looked only to escape the importunate creditors this time, and did not fear for the future.

It was a quarter of eight by the clock, the time he was required to be in the office as soon as the porters opened the doors.

Mr. Mason was the agent of the Bagg Corporation, and a man of large heart and excellent feelings. He was a little eccentric in some of his ways. He had views and opinions of his own thinking; and perhaps that was what made him seem so odd to some people.

He had found William Taylor in a store tying up bundles for twenty dollars a month. He had taken a fancy to him, and knowing him to be a prompt and correct accountant, industrious and attentive to business, and of excellent character, he had given him his present situation. William had been married over a year then, and was the father of a little boy.

Three hundred dollars a year looked like great wages to William. So he took a better house, put a few articles of neat furniture into it, opened accounts with the butcher, and grocer, the baker, and the keeper of the livery stable.

On his present salary, he made up his mind that he could live handsomely, and once or twice he took Ellen a ride. He was entirely devoted to her, and she enjoyed riding so much that it never occurred to him to count the cost.

Mr. Mason, a careful man, did count the cost, and made up his mind that William was a little too fast. His suspicions were confirmed by the livery stable keeper, who came one day to enquire if the corporation owed William anything. Others had asked the same question. They did not say much, but enough for Mr. Mason to understand that his protege was in debt.

Only a few of the employees on the corporation were paid quarterly. On the first of January, as Mr. Mason went to the factory just before eight o'clock, he saw the Deputy Sheriff standing at the gate. He was waiting there, probably, so that he could rush in and serve his writ upon the corporation, before the employees were paid.

Mr. Mason thought of William when he saw the Sheriff. So he went into the office, opened the safe, took out some money, and with the pay-roll under his arm left the place.

Just as our hero was putting on his hat to go out, Mr. Mason entered his little parlor.

"Here William, are seventy-five dollars, your quarter's salary; write your name on the pay-roll," said Mr. Mason.

"Yes, sir; but——"

"Never mind; sign your name."

"What does this mean, sir? I hope ——"

"Nothing of the sort. There, that will do. Pleasant morning Mrs. Taylor."

"Beautiful, sir."

Mr. Mason took the pay-roll under his arm again and departed.

William was astonished, and so was his wife. It looked mysterious. Why did Mr. Mason do it? They could not imagine.

On his way over, William paid the butcher, the baker and grocer, and had twenty dollars left, which would just pay the doctor's bill. As the clock struck eight the porter opened the gate and he took his place at the desk. Mr. Mason sat by the stove, reading the Boston paper.

The first person that entered the public side of the counting-room was the deputy sheriff. The head clerk had just taken out the pay-roll and prepared to pay off the employees. The sheriff read the writ.

"Who?" asked Mr. Kason.

"Spike versus Bagg Corporation—all money due to Wm. Taylor," replied the sheriff.

"We don't owe Taylor anything."

"Don't you? ..."

"Show me the pay roll."

The head clerk turned to the roll, and to his surprise found William's signature there.

"Very well;" nodded the the sheriff "I thought I was soon enough."

Of course Spike was mad when the sheriff reported to him. He was confident that the business had not been conducted in the usual manner at the office; so he decided to see Mason at once.

That gentleman received him very kindly, and took him in his private office.

"You have been playing some game upon me," said Mr. Spike, a little excited.

"We don't play games." replied the agent, with dignity.

"Did you not pay Taylor before the usual time, so as to help him cheat me out of my bill?"

"No, sir."

"But he was paid off before the office was opened."

"He was."

"Well; what did you deny it for just now?"

"I did not."

"Yes you did."

"Be civil, Mr. Spike, or I shall have nothing to say to you. I say I did not pay Mr. Taylor before the time, to help him cheat you."

"I've got a bill against him."

"That is your lookout."

"And the law allows me to collect it."

"And I don't object."

"He won't pay me. He's a scoundrel and a swindler."

"There we differ. He is a young man of excellent character. If there is any swindling about it, you have swindled him."

"I never got a dollar out of him."

"You will; he is honest, and will pay you."

"I doubt it, if he has you to keep him out of difficulty."

"I shall endeavor to keep him out of trouble."

"You shall."

"And you trusted for fifty?"

"Sixty."

"Very well. Taylor is honest. He means to pay all his debts. Now is it right to lock up nearly all his salary for weeks, perhaps months."

"But he don't mean to pay."

"Has he told you so?"

"No but he asked me to wait, which is the same thing."

"Which only proves his honesty."

If he intended to swindle you, he would not have gone to see you about it. This debt and credit business is all wrong, Mr. Spike; and if I had the making of the laws, I would not allow a debt to be collected by a legal process, unless an intention to defraud could be shown, or fairly supposed."

"Hamph! You would let us be cheated out of our property."

"I would let you cheat yourselves out of your property if you chose to do so. Look at it; here is a young man, on a salary of three hundred dollars a year. You let him horses; you trust him along for two or three months, and thus encourage him to spend his money upon what he cannot afford, and which, if he had to pay for it on the spot, he would not have. Riding is a useless luxury. You have led this young man along until he has run up a bill of thirty dollars—one tenth of his salary for a year. Now, do you suppose if you had made him pay for his horse when he had him, he would or could have ridden a quarter part of what he has?"

"I suppose not; but that is his look out."

"And yours to get your pay. Now if he had paid your bill to-day, he could not have paid their butcher or baker, probably, and they would refuse to trust him, and then perhaps his family might suffer."

"No business to have a family."

"Nay, I commend him for that; and he can support them decently, if any one would teach him the value of money. A, B and C trust him, and he lives beyond his means."

"That is his look out, not mine."

"If there were no laws by which you could collect this debt, Taylor would have been better off to-day. The credit system, properly restrained, is well enough; but I do not like to see a young man placed in your power, perhaps hampered for life because you desire to do a large business which induces you to run up long bills."

"Hump!"

Mr. Spike, give me your receipt for this bill and I will pay it.

"And the costs?"

"No; only the face of the bill."

"But I shall have to pay the Sheriff ——"

"Very well, you may pay him. Taylor shall not."

Spike thought, and concluded to accept Mr. Mason's proposition.

"John Randolph said that 'pay as you go, is the philosopher's stone,' Mr. Spike. When Taylor rides any more make him pay on the spot.',

"I shall," and Spike left not very well satisfied. But William did not ride any more, and a few days after, Mr. Mason very kindly pointed out to him the philosopher's stone. The young man owned up all Mr. Mason had suspected. A few days after, a letter came from Aunt Hannah. The old lady was very sorry the young folks had got into trouble, was glad they called upon her, enclosed a check for five hundred dollars for them to commence anew, and entreated them not to get trusted for anything.

They followed all this good advice, and William and Helen are now models of thrift.

Col. McClure in Fulton Hall.

A large crowd of persons of every political complexion gathered in Fulton Hall last evening, for the purpose of hearing the graceful and eloquent McClure discuss the issues of the campaign. At eight o'clock Col. McClure, accompanied by Messrs. Bull and Budiman, (well-known attorneys of Philadelphia,) was escorted to the hall by a procession of citizens, headed by Clemmens' Band. A delegation of the Buckalew Club of Harrisburg was present in the audience. Mr. Jay Cadwell, chairman of the meeting, introduced as the first speaker of the evening, William M. Bull, esq., of Philadelphia, who spoke substantially as follows:

Fellow Citizens—Democrats and Liberal Republicans: The preliminary skirmishes of the great fight have already been fought, in North Carolina and Maine, and in the result of either he could see nothing to deter, intimidate, or cause to hesitate, the friends of Greeley, Buckalew and Reform. The second Tuesday in October will decide whether U. S. Grant or Horace Greeley shall be president. It may do well enough for some newspapers to say that it makes no material difference as to the October election, but he held to the old axiom—"As goes the election in October, so it will go in November." It always has been so; it will be so again. He would now discuss the issues closely for a brief time. The vile tongue of slander has never yet dared to attack the integrity of Horace Greeley or Charles R. Buckalew. But how is it with Hartranft? Can any sane man, who is unprejudiced and fair-minded, read the able review of Hartranft's record and the exposure of his frauds, as given to the public by the Lancaster Express ... Philadelphia Press, without ... ing one of two things—either a rascal or a fool, and in either case is not fit to be Governor of Pennsylvania. After a review of the difference between the two platforms—for the speaker maintained there was a distinctive difference, the one declaring for the one term principle, the other opposing it—Mr. Bull retired amid loud applause, his speech being necessarily brief, as preliminary to Col. McClure's address.

Mr. Cadwell now introduced the Colonel in the following words: Gentlemen, the person whom I am now about to introduce to you has been called a miner because he happens to be interested in a mine; but it has come out that he is a bolter, going about the State shooting thunderbolts at the Hartranft men.

Col. M. then spoke substantially as follows: A few years ago he had delivered a political speech in Lancaster, from the very stage upon which he now stood, and on that occasion the eloquent German orator—Carl Schurz—stood by his side, both battling for a common cause, the success of the principles and candidates of the Republican party. He was here again to speak upon the same subject. The same men who spoke a few years ago in advocacy of the principles of the Republican party, will speak again—but against that party; not against the principles, but in opposition to the corrupt men who control its party machinery. Has Carl Schurz changed? Had the speaker changed? Has Andrew G. Curtin changed? Have John Hickman, Gen. Moorhead, Gen. Cake, William Stewart, David Barkley, Galusha A. Grow—have they all changed? Something has changed? Have men, or have times changed? Has not the Republican party changed? Has it not forgotten its true mission, and have not many of the best men in the party been driven from it by the corruption of its leaders? He declared unequivocally in the affirmative. The Republican such bad men that honest men can no longer follow. What elected the Republican candidates in 1868? It was their pledge to restore peace and security to the whole people that had elected them. But had they kept that pledge? No; and he was here to night to call the Republican party to an account for its stewardship. There is not an honest man in Lancaster Co., or in this State, or in the Nation, who will not bow down and confess that the Baltimore platform is the true sentiment of the people all over the country. Call me what you will, said the speaker, but let it not be said that I have joined hands with those who would usurp powers not delegated to them by the people. He could afford to be called hard names, for had he not been present at the berth of the Republican party? He had spent the best energies of his manhood in battling for that party, but he had never sought power by it, nor had he ever been present when the dividend was declared and the profits were divided. Grant had never voted the Republican ticket until he was elected President: Governor Geary never voted the Republican ticket until after he had been elected Governor; Gen. Hartranft cast his first vote with the Republicans after he had been elected Auditor General; and now, forsooth, because the speaker would not vote for these renegade Democrats he was not a good Republican. He voted time and again to put Democrats in the best positions within the gift of the Republican party; they were continually forced upon him, and he had determined to exercise the privilege at least one time in his life of selecting a Democrat to suit himself—an honest Democrat—and that man was Charles R. Buckalew. Simon Cameron had left the Democratic party for that party's good; it was in fact the one good thing of his life, up to this time; but if defeated in October—if the verdict of the people should be against Simon's subservient tools, the old trickster would declare that the Republican party of Pennsylvania was no longer his (for it has been his literally for some time past,) and he would leave the party as he left the Democrats—for the party's good. The speaker had determined hereafter that if he must have Democrats forced upon him (as had been the rule in the Republican party) he would select them himself—take them straight, plain and honest. He could no longer stay in the Republican ranks and see these corrupt Democrats, who had "come over," elevated to power; he had stood it long enough. He was like the boy who said he didn't mind having mackerel sixty or seventy times in succession for breakfast, but he didn't like to have them for a regular diet. Look, if you please, at the record of Hartranft and Allen. Hartranft had been convicted by a regular process, while Allen's rascality had been so proverbial in the past that it had ceased to be a question. Why, Allen is naturally corrupt; he won't even be honest once in a while—for novelty. How were the nominations of these men received by the press of the good old county of Lancaster? Four Republican newspapers had declared them unfit for the position in question, and unworthy of the confidence of the people. This was immediately after the nomination. Two of those papers have since changed their minds—the people here could perhaps tell why better than the speaker. He could not for the life of him see how men who, only three months ago declared Hartranft and Allen unworthy of confidence and support, could now sustain them! What change has come over these corrupt candidates? Have they joined church? He did not wish to be understood as charging these newspapers with anything; he knew nothing—if he knew any facts he would speak them out. But he would say that party behests and party pressure had doubtless had much to do with bringing them in. Thank God, the people cannot be brought under any such pressure. Why, these candidates were so unpopular that a council of war was called to devise ways and means to remove the obnoxious men from the ticket. Who constituted that council? Simon Cameron, M. S. Quay, Bob Mackey, Jolly Jack Hiestand, and others of that school. They sat in council for the purpose of selecting some jackass whose ears would not stick out through the lion's skin, and when found they intended to label him—"a brave, bold, true lion." But no Cameronian jackass could be found to answer the purpose, for they knew that the moment a hair of the jackass should stick out that meant "Boom!" a shot from Forney. Simon could not take an honest man, and yet he couldn't find a jackass that wasn't so marked that the lion skin would fail to cover him. So the thing fell through, and this council gave out that they never dreamed of such a thing as changing the State ticket. The speaker concluded with an appeal to the citizens of the Old Guard to vote right in October. If you approve of this rule, and desire its complete control for three years more in your State, and for six years more in the first legislative tribunal of the nation, you should vote its State ticket and for its Legislative candidates. If you do not approve it—if you desire to regenerate your Commonwealth to honor in her National representation, and secure fidelity in your government at Harrisburg—you must buckle on your armor ... not betrayed. Six years ago, ... the Republicans met in council to select Senators and Assembly men, one of your most upright and fearless men, Mr. Billingfelt [cheers and applause,] answered: "I am for Thaddeus Stevens for Senator; for Simon Cameron never!" [protracted cheers] and he was nominated with boundless enthusiasm, and was elected and re-elected by large majorities. Let no candidates be less specific now, for he who hesitates to be right will be the easy prey of wrong. Let your people be true to their own integrity in the election of State and Legislative candidates, and Pennsylvania will be at last redeemed from the power of rings and plunderers. With Charles R. Buckalew [cheers] as Governor our revenue will be safe from the reach of speculators; our Legislature will be compelled to fidelity in its enactments, and pardons will cease to be political perquisities. With an able and upright Senator to represent us at Washington, our great State will be released from the bondage of political traders, who are awarded with the official favors for defrauding the people. With Gov. Curtin [cheers] in our Constitutional Convention we may confidently look for a just and enlightened revision of our fundamental law. His nomination by the Liberal Committee was made with his approval, [applause] and will be formally accepted as soon as he recovers his recent most critical illness. The candidates before you are truly representative on both sides. Curtin or Cameron, Buckalew or Hartranft—choose between them. [Protracted applause.] — Lancaster Express.

GOV. CURTIN'S POSITION.

Defined by Senator M'Clure the War Governor Repudiates the Ring and Supports the Liberal Movement.

At the large meeting at Columbia on Friday night, Col. M'Clure's most salient points were in reference to the position of the Hon. A. G. Curtin in both the national and state canvass. The Colonel did not make any unauthorized statements; and, as an early steadfast personal friend of Governor Curtin, his statement was entitled to, and received unbounded credence. The weight and importance which the Grant administration men attached to the political position of Governor Curtin was evidenced by the pertinacity with which he had been pursued, and sought to be won over to the support of the national or state tickets. He had been approached at St. Petersburg by the emisaries of Grant and Cameron, with proffers of position and honors which would have tempted almost any man to sacrifice even principle. He had persistently refused their proffers; but in his retirement in Nice, for the purpose of restoring his impaired health, he was still pursued and importuned to lend his aid in sustaining the failing fortunes of Grant and Cameron. London, Paris—every place in which he had taken refuge to recruit his shattered health and guard himself from political vandals, he had been visited by these emissaries, with importunate demands. Alive to the exigencies of their position, these men had imploringly begged his influence. Pennsylvania, without that influence, was lost not only to Grant, but to the state ticket. New York was irretrievably lost; Indiana was gone, and defeat, certain and unmistakable, would be the result of his disaffection. Gov. Curtin was offered any position which his ambition could crave, within the gift of the government. All these offers and importunities were respectfully, but positively declined. Governor Curtin would have resigned his commission long before he did, had he not been earnestly appealed to to continue his mission. It was his early expressed determination to return home, and to direct all his earnest and vigilant efforts for the over-throw of the Grant administration and the Cameron ring in Pennsylvania.

As regarded Governor Curtin's political aspirations, Colonel M'Clure stated that he would positively have declined the nomination for vice president either at Cincinnati or Baltimore. Had the liberal convention at Cincinnati tendered him a unanimous nomination for the presidency, he would have deferred to the wishes of the people, and accepted. He was ambitious, however, of serving the people of Pennsylvania, in what might be esteemed an humble capacity but in one which he regarded as the highest in honor which could be bestowed. A proposition had been made to revise and remodel the fundamental principles of our state—demanded by its growth, its prosperity and importance. In that he did feel an interest, and desired to participate, if his wishes could be seconded by his fellow-citizens. It was in furtherance of this wish, and the earnest desire of men of all parties—democrats and republicans—that the movement had been made to place him in nomination as a delegate at large to the constitutional convention. This step was taken with Governor Curtin's full knowledge and approval; and as an earnest of the sincerity which pertained to the feelings and purposes of Governor Curtin's friends, there were several democrats, as well as republicans, who had been placed in nomination for the position, who were willing to withdraw in favor of Govenor Curtin, in order to secure the weight of his talents and his personal influence in a re-organization of the fundamental law of the state.

A dispatch was received from Mrs. Curtin last night, by Colonel M'Clure, that Governor Curtin had arrived safely at Saratoga, and that he had stood the journey well. There are promises and hopes of his speedy restoration to health, and we have the assurance that, should he be able to address his fellow-citizens during the pending canvass, he will do so, in favor of Charles R. Buckalew and Horace Greeley. Colonel M'Clure assured the people of Columbia, that Governor Curtin's canvass notes would give out no uncertain sounds—the old Keystone would give out no uncertain sounds. Victory for honest men in opposition to the Cameron ring was the watchword; and in the memorable words of Richlieu, "there is no such word as fail" in the reform lexicon.

WILL MR. HENRY WILSON SPEAK.

At last we have one more utterance on the Credit Mobilier scandal. Mr. James G. Blaine simply declared the story of his ownership in the Credit Mobilier baseless and groundless, saying he never owned a dollar in the Company in his life, either directly or indirectly. Mr. Henry L. Dawes,—a gentleman to whose word we are glad to accord greater weight,—says "neither Oaks nor any other "man, dead or alive, ever gave me, "directly or indirectly, a penny of the 'Credit Mobilier,' or of any other corporation in this world."

Gentlemen! this will not do. Mr. Oakes Ames, long a representative in Congress from Massachusetts and reputed a man of vast wealth, wrote that he had placed a quantity of the stock of this Credit Mobilier, where-of he was a master mind, "among "Congressmen, where it would do most good." His letter, giving the scandalous details of this wholesale bribery in his own handwriting, was produced in the trial, identified, sworn to, and otherwise confirmed. On its back was noted the following list, sworn to, as the list he had given to a stockholder of the persons with ...:

Patterson of New Hampshire	3,000
Willson of Massachusetts	2,000
Painter (Reb.) for Quigley	3,000
S. Colfax, Speaker	2,000
Scofield and Kelley of Penn, each	2,000
Elliot of Massachusetts	2,000
Dawes of Massachusetts	2,000
Fowler of Tennessee	2,000
Boutwell of Massachusetts	2,000
Bingham and Garfiled of Ohio, each	2,000

Indorsed: OAKES AMES, Jan. 30, 1868.

Accompanying this revelation came a vast mass of confirmatory evidence. It is all of record, in proceedings duly held before an examiner in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania for the Eastern District.—Mere general denials will not meet this case. Till Mr. Ames is forced on the stand by these gentlemen whose good names are thus aspersed, the public will believe they dare not face the testimony that would follow.

—Meanwhile we invite the attention of our readers to this further statement, made editorially in The Sun:

One of our reporters visited one of the more conspicuous members of Congress mentioned in Mr. Oakes Ames's list, and this member admitted to him that, so far as he was concerned, the fact was so. In addition to this testimony we have that of another prominent Republican in the House of Representatives, who has personally informed us that in the latter part of 1867 the proposition to allot to him a portion of Credit Mobilier stock was made to him by a member of the Credit Mobilier Company; and it was declined. This agent said to our informant: "All your friends are in it:" and showed him a list of names written on a paper, saying:—"These are the Senators and members who have an interest."

Now notice the most that, up to this hour, the most unsrupulous of the Administration organs has been able to say in defence:

Having had all their other fabrications knocked on the head, they have concocted some stupid falsehood about Credit Mobilier shares, and Oakes Ames, or Ames Oakes, or something of that kind—and call upon the persons concerned to answer. We earnestly hope said persons will do nothing of the kind.

That is all! An affectation of ignorance (or is it genuine?) about one of the best known men in Congress, and one of the leading builders of the Pacific Railway; and an exhortation to its people to make no defence! Is it not natural that there is no defense to make? For he is the candidate of the Grant party for Vice-President of the United States, arraigned by a Congressman from his own State for having been bought with a bribe of stock in a Company whose interests depended on his legislation. How can he keep quiet under a charge of that gravity, from a source of that respectability? How can he fail to demand an investigation? How can he be held innocent if he do not?—New York Tribune.

All for the Best.

The Beaver Argus.

J. WEYAND, Editor and Proprietor.

Beaver, Pa., October 2d, 1872.

"AND he released unto them Barrabas.—How strikingly history, both sacred and profane, from time to time repeats itself. Pontius Pilate, the old Roman Governor of Judea, at the request of wicked and malicious men who sought to serve an effete and rapidly decaying system of religion, released Barrabas the robber. So, John W. Geary, the Pontius Pilate of to-day, willingly (wherein he differs from his prototype) yielding to the clamors of corrupt and desperate men, and with a design to preserve a system of villainy and fraud upon which the people have set the seal of their condemnation, releases not one but two modern Barrabases. The Governor of Judea yielded reluctantly to the clamors of a great majority of the people whom he governed, and through fear of Cæsar.—The Governor of Pennsylvania, heavily laden with fear, and now even more heavily laden with sin and disgrace, against the wishes of the great majority of his people, against the laws of his State, with a shocking disregard of propriety, yields—to his everlasting dishonor be it said—and pardons and releases two tried and convicted thieves. Did the people of Pennsylvania need anything more to convince them of the propriety of cutting loose from party ties, and hurling from power the men who have made our State a by-word and a reproach in the nation, this last resort of sin grown desperate, furnishes the most convincing proof of the great need of the hour. If it be right to release Yerkes and Marcer to save Hartranft, then why not offer a free pardon to all the criminals in the jails and penitentiaries in the State who will agree by affidavit, or vote, or voice, to support him for the great office to which he aspires?

The Honorable, the Judge, in sentencing these men, said that the limit of the law was not sufficient punishment for their crime. But their services are needed now outside the walls. They understand "addition, division and silence," and must not be left to pine in solitude when their companions need their testimony.—The first thing Yerkes does is to go, not to his home to see his wife and children, if he has any, but to the office of a paper—men in the interest of his confederates—and there makes a statement (not under oath) that he never swore to the facts set forth in the affidavit over his signature; that the account of General Hartranft, amounting to over six hundred thousand dollars, was a private account, although the latter claims to be poor! Moreover, the very first statement he makes betrays his guilt. Before he is charged he begins to deny that he is influenced by fear, favor or affection in making his statement. Before he is released he is made to declare on his honor (?) that he will not pay any man anything to secure his release. Doubtless, all the criminals in the country would agree to so easy a condition as that. Ah! his masters laid their schemes! But with all their art they are like the ostrich, only hiding their heads in the sand whilst the whole body of corruption is exposed. Truly [illegible] they first make mad."

Then, "once more unto the breach, honest men," for the day of our redemption draweth nigh. Let us not hesitate to follow where Andrew G. Curtin and all the great leaders of Republicanism lead, and the prison gates will open once more, not to release, but to receive the plunderers of our great State.

CURTIN, Grow, Buckalew, Marshall, and Moorhead, are in favor of honesty on the part of State officials. Cameron, Hartranft, Evans, Mackey, Yerkes & Co. believe that State officers have a right to be public plunderers. At all events their practice has taught us to believe that this is their faith. Voters! take your choice.

IT is said that the Hartranft speakers in this county have been fighting the rebels so vigorously in their speeches, and calling upon the people to "come to the front once more," that they now actually believe themselves that the country is in a state of war. We are prepared, therefore to hear that most of them have advised the mothers, sisters and sweethearts of the county to commence scraping lint without delay. Lint societies may, consequently, be precipitated upon us at any time.

THE Argus is printing "stickers" for the Democratic candidates. It is not a political paper.—Radical.

That is more than we can say for the Radical. It has not energy or enterprise enough to print stickers for anybody. The editor has to go off to the Pittsburgh Post, (Democratic headquarters) to get stickers printed when Republicans call for them at the Radical office.

The news is encouraging from every part of the State. In many counties the most prominent Republicans are open and bold in the fight against the Cameron Ring candidates Hartranft and Allen. While many are outspoken, thousands of honest Republican voters are quiet but determined to help by their votes to defeat Cameron corruption. We have confidence in the honesty of hundreds of Republican voters in this county, and we cannot believe they can be "whipped in" to support such men as Hartranft and Allen.

HONESTY VS DISHONESTY.—In the present campaign Buckalew and Hartley represent honesty and integrity on the part of public officers; they have both heretofore belonged to the Democratic party; a very large number of the honest Republicans of the State are now giving them a hearty support. They give them this support because they believe the general welfare demands this at their hands. On the other side stand Hartranft and Allen—men who represent Simon Cameron, Mackey, and their ignoble retainers. These notorious characters embody the thieving element in our State politics. They neither claim to be honest themselves nor insist upon honesty in others. In fact, they believe, the public treasuries may as well as not be plundered, and they, therefore, put their belief into practice, by reaching for every dollar they can get their eyes on. Between these men and what they represent, we have to make choice on next Tuesday. Voters! after that day let it be said to your honor that you voted against dishonesty and in favor of honest men.

MACKEY LOANED Yerkes $165,000 of State funds while Hartranft was Auditor general. Yerkes broke up and for some crime committed in Philadelphia is now in the penitentiary. Mackey and his bondsmen are still held for the amount lost through Yerkes. It has now transpired that Mackey will not be a candidate for State Treasurer next winter, but will try to lobby a bill through the Legislature relieving him of the payment of the money lost through Hartranft's "Dear Yerkes." Hartranft, as Governor, of course would approve the bill, while Buckalew as Governor would veto it.

THERE are many voters who vote under a pressure of excitement and enthusiasm with a party, or for certain candidates, because they believe such party or such candidates will be successful, and for no other reason.—Such voters count as strong as others who vote their honest convictions for the local and general interests of the people and the whole country. The good citizen can easily determine which class of voters are most entitled to the respect and confidence of an intelligent and law abiding people. Every voter should vote as his conscience directs, regardless of opinions manufactured by corrupt party leaders and local politicians, to deceive and mislead the people.

STICK a pin here—in this our honest conviction:—Hartranft and Allen, Cameron's Treasury Ring candidates for Governor and Auditor General, will be defeated in the State by thousands of a majority for Buckalew and Hartley. In every part of the State, and in many of the strong Republican counties in particular, Republicans will not submit any longer to have their party ruled and disgraced by Cameron and his corrupt Treasury Ring. The disgrace is so notorious that his organs, heretofore outspoken in his defence, are now ashamed to defend him. They expect to deceive the people by denying that he has any corrupt interest in the election, of Hartranft and Allen. But another lease of power by their election, and he will continue master of the organization and all disguise will be thrown off, and his organs will again grind out music to please his ear. The honest Republican voters of the State have determined to purify their party, and purify it they will by the defeat of Hartranft and Allen and their Ring master Simon Cameron.

WITH all the evidence of dishonesty against Hartranft, which has not and can not be truthfully denied, how can the people vote to reward him by placing him in a higher position where the Cameron "ring" can more effectually use him to further their designs to plunder the treasury, and use the money to elect a dishonest United States Senator. Let the honest voters cast their ballots against Hartranft and Allen, and Cameron's ring of thieves will not longer handle the public money.

Let us do our share of the work in Beaver county.—Radical.

That is pretty cool, and its frigidity will be appreciated when it is borne in mind that Hartranft shared Evans' plunder, and helped to get him out of the clutches of the law. Evans is one of Hartranft's most active supporters at the present time for the Governorship of the State, and well he may be for if his candidate is successful the two together will have every facility at their disposal to blot out all traces of the fraud through which the State lost nearly $300,000. Hartranft and Evans were together in life, and the Radical only makes itself ridiculous in trying to part them in death.

THE editor of the Radical says that either "Capt. McClelland or the editor of the ARGUS" wrote a communication for the Pittsburgh Post, relative to a "bargain between M. Weyand Esq. and himself" (M. S. Quay).—So far as we are concerned the charge is false in general and false in detail. We never saw the communication, nor heard of it until we read it in the Post; and a note from Capt. McClelland denies all knowlenge of it in the same specific manner.

NEARLY all the old wheel-horses of the Republican party in this State are now supporting Buckalew and Hartley. This week we add to the names of those already in the harness, Judge Linn of Centre county, Hon Eli Slifer and the Hon. T. J. Coffey. Judge Linn, has for many years past been the President Judge of his judicial district, and in 1867 was a formidable candidate for Supreme Judge against Judge Williams of Pittsburgh. Hon. Eli Slifer was for several terms State Treasurer, and Mr. Coffey was assistant United States Attorney General under President Lincoln.

CURTIN TO THE FRONT.—The long agony of the Cameron Ring in Pennsylvania is over at last, and they can take what comfort comes from knowing the worst when they read the letter of the Hon. Andrew G. Curtin, accepting the liberal nomination for the Constitutional Convention. They will scarcely have the effrontery to claim that they think slightly of this most formidable adversary. As long as there was any doubt of his purposes they persecuted and waylaid him to enlist his powerful influence and eloquent voice in behalf of their own corrupt and failing cause. They sent a delegate to Europe to worry him on the way to the steamer. They dispatched the most phenomenal bore in Philadelphia to intercept him in New-York harbor. They haunted his sick room and besieged every house in which he took refuge to try to use upon him the arguments which have so often proved effectual upon weaker or more selfish men. The labor was all lost. Gov. Curtin is not of the material which can be wheedled or cajoled or corrupted. He waited his own good time, and with the first impulse of returning health he issues this ringing manifesto, announcing his entry into the fight on the side where he has always fought, in favor of honesty and truth, and against knavery and lies.

There are few men of whom it can be said in this intensely individual and practical society that "one blast upon his bugle-horn were 'worth a thousand men.'" But it is no metaphor to say this of Gov. Curtin. He is one of those men whom it is fashionable to call magnetic. He has that rare sympathetic quality which enables him to attract the confidence as readily as he convinces the understanding of his hearers. No public man in recent years, has possessed this quality in an equal degree. He is not only the best known citizen in the State but the most popular.—His long political life is without a suspicion of corrupt or irregular practices. In a State where every form of malfeasance in office has become a science under the tuition of the veteran chief of the Harrisburg Ring, his reputation has never suffered from a single breath of slander. His personal honor is no less unstained than his political consistency. From the birth of the Republican party he has been its most untiring and chivalrous champion. He only revolts from the dictation of the men who have captured the Republican organization to assist in saving Republican principles.

In deference to the wishes of those honorable Republicans who, while adhering to President Grant, still desire to save the State from the infamy of the election of Hartranft, Gov. Curtin confines himself in this admirable letter to a discussion of the local contest. It is a fight which calls for the best efforts of every one who cares anything for the good name of the Commonwealth. There has never been so shameless a campaign before.

But, in spite of the power and the energy and the wealth of this desperate conspiracy there are enough honest and independent men to save the State. We have hitherto refrained from making any predictions in regard to the October elections. But to-day we feel justified, in view of the assurances we have received from widely different and intelligent sources, in announcing to our readers that the redemption of Pennsylvania is sure. There will be an amount of bribery and fraud such as was never seen before in all its history. But there will not be enough to overcome the verdict of the honest people, and after the election the courts and the penitentiaries will have their turn. The State is safe now, and from this day the majority of Buckalew will increase. Within a week the great War Governor will be on the stump; the fruit of the summers work will begin to be seen; the refuge of thieves which seemed to be impregnable will be shown to be as weak as Wrong always is in a square fight with Right.—N Y Tribune

THE voters of Beaver county must remember that Hartranft and Allen—the one a candidate for Governor, and the other a candidate for Auditor General—are the real representatives of the Treasury Ring in our present contest. With these two men defeated the treasury vaults will be opened, and the worthless checks which are now hidden in their dark recesses and carried along as so much money on hand, will be brought to light and the scoundrels who deposited them there, will be exposed to view. The deeds of those who have assisted in their perpetration, will be kept hidden and the honest but plundered people of Pennsylvania will never know definitely who robbed them nor the amount stolen. Honest men! we know you do not intend to vote for Hartranft and against yourselves. Do not forget to vote against Allen too. Stickers will be at hand; use them to some purpose over the names of these dishonest and disreputable aspirants for public offices.

"Whom the Gods Wish to Detsroy they first Make Mad."

On Friday last, Governor Geary, yielding at length to the solicitations of Hartranft and Mackey, granted a pardon to the notorious Chas. T. Yerkes Jr. of whom the Judge that sentenced him said, that, in his case, "the maximum punishment affixed by law to the crime of larceny was singularly merciful." Not daring to trust their man out of sight, a carriage was kept in waiting at the door of the Penitentiary, and the moment Yerkes was released, he was driven with indecent haste to a newspaper office, there to pay with falsehood the price of his liberation. More dead than alive, the poor wretch subscribed his name to a statement prepared some weeks since, and then the pardon for which he had bartered his soul, was placed in his hands. What was the motive of Hartranft, Mackey & Co. in procuring this man's release from the penitentiary? No one ever doubted his guilt—every day since his trial new evidence has come to light to confirm [illegible] of his conviction and sentence. Is not the reason apparent? Can any other reason be assigned than the desperate hope that this convicted felon might be used to lighten a little the load of infamy resting on Hartranft's shoulders.

Citizens of Pennsylvania! has it come to this, that an unscrupulous candidate's "political necessities" shall be made to justify the turning loose in your midst notorious criminals, the one fifth of whose terms of imprisonment has not yet expired?

This move on the part of Hartranft and his friends, crowns the many criminal blunders whereof they have been guilty. It has excited the indignation of honest men throughout the length and breadth of the State. No one now need doubt the election of Charles R. Buckalew

IMPORTANT INQUIRIES.

Why was it that Butcher Swoope and Hartranft had a carriage in waiting at the front door of the Eastern Penitentiary on Friday last?

Why was Yerkes driven by these worthies to the office of the North American, an unscrupulous Hartranft organ, before being permitted to see his friends or family?

Why was his pardon withheld until he had then and there signed the statement published in the "Ring" papers, exculpating Hartranft.

When in the history of Pennsylvania or any other State, was it deemed necessary to obtain the certificate of a felon to establish the reputation of a candidate for Governor?

Why could not the "Ring" induce Yerkes to swear to his statement? Was he afraid of being prosecuted by Alderman W. W. Dougherty for perjury?

Is it true, as stated, that the carriage was stopped at three different saloons between the penitentiary and the North American office, for the purpose of nerving the trembling culprit?

BEAVER FALLS, Sept 28, 1872.

Sequel to Rutan's Shawl Story.—Those that have tears to shed, read about J. S. Rutan's woolen shawl; it certainly is one of the most pathetic and romantic stories that has appeared since the "Babes in the Woods" was first introduced into the literary world. Jeemes has evidently read that thrilling tale in his youth, and wanted to imitate the dear little robbins when they carried leaves and covered the "babe in the woods." Jeemes should have that story copy righted and published in the New-York Ledger; it is remarkable how the wounded soldier should perambulate round till he would accidently find himself in that fine old country mansion, face to face with the mother of the hero of the shawl—the mother of Jeemes. (Here is where you are to shed tears.)

Now for the sequel. I am sorry to spoil the beautiful story that Jeemes has racked his brains to study out for political purposes; "but truth will out." These are facts as given me by a soldier—an eye witness—and told me on the Fair Grounds yesterday. He says he was a comrade of Jeemes, and with him at the battle of Fair Oak, and on the first charge Jeemes had a pressing occasion to go to the rear; he did see him run to the rear at the first fire; and Gipsy Roan would have never lost a heat if he could make equal time to Jeemes shanghie legs on that retreat. The next place he met him was after the battle was over, he was making a heavy charge on a bottle of hospital stores, and was boasting of the hand to hand conflict he had with the enemy, (hospital stores.) Valorous Jeemes can't deny that he was the first to retreat at the battle of Fair Oaks, and that he traded that "shawl" off to another bummer on the retreat, for a bottle of hospital stores; and that's how it was.

NOT HOODWINKED.

BADEN, Pa., Sept. 28, 1872.

MR. EDITOR—A large and enthusiastic meeting of the friends of Greeley, Brown Buckalew and Reform was held here on last Tuesday evening. The meeting was presided over by A. F. Forsythe, esq. Able and patriotic addresses were delivered by S. B. Wilson, E. B. Daugherty and J. H. McCreery, esqs. The Rochester Brass band was in attendance. A large poll was raised in the afternoon, and the flag of Liberty floats therefrom. The meeting adjourned with three rousing cheers for Greeley, Brown, Buckalew and the music. Baden will do her best on the 8th of next month for the election of Buckalew. A. B.

Buckalew Meetings.—We have reports from but three or four of the Greeley, Brown and Buckalew meetings held in this county last week.

The one held in Broadway Hall, New-Brighton, was addressed by Ex-Senator Doolittle of Wisconsin, and W. D. Moore, esq., of Pittsburgh. The meeting was a very full one, and the speeches were strong and in good taste. Mr. Doolittle confined himself almost exclusively to National politics, while Mr. Moore, showed conclusively that Hartranft was both morally and intellectually unfit to fill the office of Governor of Pennsylvania.

Messrs McCreery & Cunningham of Beaver had a fine meeting during the week, at Bocktown, Independence twp. We have heard their addresses very favorably spoken of by those who were present. The audience was large, and fine results are promised from that locality.

A Greeley, Brown and Buckalew pole was raised at Unionville, New Sewickley twp., last Saturday afternoon. A large crowd was present, and strong speeches were made by Messrs Morton [illegible]

[illegible] Shame.

Under this head the Philadelphia Inquirer, a journal which has hitherto taken no decided stand in the pending State canvass, thus speaks of the development recently made in an interview with Gen. Irwin, late State Treasurer, which we reproduce in another column: "The allegations so distinctly made in the account of this interview against some of the most prominent officials and politicians of the Commonwealth, and notably against Simon Cameron, are entitled or are not entitled to consideration, solely as they are or are not supported, first, by the character of their author and again by the concurrent testimony of common report.

"There is nothing known of Gen. Irwin, either in his position as a private citizen or as an official of the State to whom vast trusts have been confided, that argue against his unimpeachable honor and integrity. Any statements of his must go unchallenged until they can be disproved by cumulative evidence from the mouths of men as trustworthy as himself. But his present statements do not rest solely upon his character for veracity; they possess internal evidence of their truth, and common report sustains them in every essential particular.

"We are, therefore, compelled to regard the account of this interview as correct. From it we once more have confirmation of what has long been rumored, viz, that the Treasury of Pennsylvania for many years past has been the vault from which Simon Cameron has drawn the moneys for the support of his banks and other great financial enterprises. This allegation—so often made and never satisfactorily denied—seems to be fully established by General Irwin's testimony concerning certain personal efforts made by the Camerons, father and son, to obtain possession of large sums from the Treasury while Irwin was its controlling officer. They previously [illegible] Treasurers before his term of office; they were unsuccessful, however, and as a result they defeated him when he was a second time a candidate for the place.

"The intelligent public, who have noted the career of Simon Cameron, did not need the confirmation which this recital gives of the fact that, incapable of ever being elected to an office, yet hungry always for official spoils, Simon Cameron has, with most outrageous and indecent openness, bought for himself place, power and wealth. He has not, however, used in this way his own ill-gotten gains; for, being not alone hungry to get, but as hungry to hold, he has taken the moneys of the State with which to buy corrupt legislators to vote him into the Senate of the United States. Not alone corrupt, but the source of corruption, he has pursued his devious path through political life, polluting younger and honester men as he went. His vast patronage as Senator, has enabled him to make or unmake the prosperity of hosts of politicians; and, as they were subject to him, or otherwise, he elevated or cast them down. The various offices of the General Government being packed by him with his subsidaries, he has controlled the nominating conventions of both State and city; and two of the greatest evils resulting from his advantage in this particular are, first the election of his clansmen to the Legislature, and again, his own continuous hold upon the Senatorship

"Among the legislative candidates who ask the support of this community, there are several who are the mere creatures of Cameron, who, if elected, must vote as he directs, no matter how their interests will conflict with the best interests of the Commonwealth. They are not the representatives of the people, but of Simon Cameron, and to support them at the polls in October will be but to perpetuate the shame of the Commonwealth and the power of this unscrupulous politician."

Curtin vs Cameron

THE REAL FIGHT BEGINS.

Pennsylvania's War Governor Rushes to the Rescue.

VOICE OF A PATRIOT.

Reception of Ex-Governor Curtin at His Home in Bellefonte.

HIS SPEECH IN RESPONSE TO THE POPULAR CLAMOR.

What he Knows About Hartranft.

BELLEFONTE, PA, September 28.—There is considerable excitement here to night over the reception of Ex-Gov. Curtin, although many of his old friends did not participate. After the long torchlight procession, which took up a good part of the evening, the Governor was finally driven to a stand in front of the court house, and introduced to the audience by Hon. L. A. Mackey, of Lock Haven. The Governor spoke as follows:

GOV. CURTIN'S SPEECH.

You see, my friends and neighbors, that I am glad to see you. A residence in a foreign country of different associations and political organizations, so far from weakening my affection for my native country and my admiration for her free and glorious institutions, has strengthened and confirmed them. I return home after.

AN ABSENCE OF THREE YEARS and a half, separated from all the political asperities which divide men and countrymen too often in this country, feeling none of those violent opinions, which excite men in a political contest such as I now find engaging the vast people of my country. Away from the newspapers and party drill, I have not imbibed that fierce political hatred, for it is only political hatred which seems to have inspired parties and men in the United States. Why, it is strange to a man absent so long from his country to find "thief, liar, traitor," modest words in the political literature of the Treasury ring a common word, and yet man who independently, in this country attempts what he believes is right, must be denounced.

My fellow-citizens, I long acted with the party called Republicans, I received its honors, I discharged its duties, and I tried to discharge my duty. [Applause.] It was the pleasure of the people of this State to lift me to the position of the highest honors in years, long years, of great suffering, when the country was torn and convulsed by civil war. I witnessed that struggle with regret. I did not measure the magnitude, nor did I understand its full consequences. I was for my Government intact, and did not believe that any State or combination of States had a right to secede from the Union; certainly that they had to plunge the country into a civil war. When the war was over I belonged to that class of men seen in the Republican party who believed in general amnesty and the ballot. What could we do? Could we kill all the men in the rebellion, or could we take them back. [A voice—"take them back."] The popular sentiment of the best statesmen in this land was that we should take them back into the fellowship of the Union, and if they rebelled again teach them again we could compel them to obey the laws. I believed at that time, and believe now, that we could have had peace throughout the land if a general amnesty could have been proclaimed and the ballot with it. [Applause.]

My fellow citizens, the war came on through the teachings of certain Southern politicians, who supported a doctrine commonly called States rights. Now I fear, my fellow citizens, that the pendulum has swung too far in the other direction. [Applause.] [illegible] work of States rights, we have also a just right to complain that there is of Government just now, overlooking the just rights of the States.

I come now to speak of Pennsylvania. My friends and neighbors, all your rights of property, all your rights of personal liberty, are found protected in the government of the State. Now I am told to-day, I was told in England, that the State of Pennsylvania must elect a ticket put into the field because it affected the election of a President. I hold to no such doctrine. I would not humiliate my State by such a doctrine. I would all the rights guaranteed to them by the Constitution, and would accord to the National Government all the powers given it by that instrument, the protection of the people of Pennsylvania, and the preservation of the purity of their government for themselves, in which other States have comparatively little interest, and which has no connection with national politics. Now, my fellow citizens, I have declared in a letter recently written, and which has given offense to some of my political friends, that I would not support the ticket put in nomination last spring, and will support for Governor Charles R. Buckalew. [Applause.] I know Mr. Buckalew well; have known him for over twenty years. He has made his mark upon the legislation and Constitution of the State. I have differed with him on political opinions, and have acted with the party in opposition to his views. I have never received his support for an office in my life, but I know he is a

PURE, HONEST MAN.

[Applause.] Now, my fellow-citizens, I have nothing to say against General Hartranft; he was a gallant soldier, and served his country faithfully, but in an evil hour, in his ambition, he would become Governor of Pennsylvania. If he had been Governor quite so [illegible] years he would not be [Laughter.] [illegible] with a ring surrounding the Treasury of the State, not of recent date. It has been in full power for six years. The present Governor of Pennsylvania was nominated and elected by the influence of this same ring. It has been the ever since. It then was forged as a combination made to elect the Governor and provide all the machinery by which they could reach every county in the State where they could control a vote and return the chief to the United States Senate.

IT IS S[illegible]

that all this is fair. [Is it] fair? General Irwin, of Beaver county, was six years Commissary General of Pennsylvania. He held office during the war. I never heard an objection made to the discharge of his official duties while in that office. I never heard him charged with malfeasance in office. There was no combination for plunder around him. I don't know in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to-day a man whose word I could rely with more steadfast belief than that of Gen. Irwin.

Have you read his statement? He says that when he was elected State Treasurer Mr. Scott was elected Senator, and a new election was to be held the coming year, and they proposed to him that they would re-elect him to the office if he would take out of the Treasury $148,000, a balance due on the amount expended on the election of Scott. Now, my friends, Mr. Scott is no party to that. I believe Scott to be an honest man, but he was

and they expended money. General Irwin refused their request, and he was turned out of office and Mr. Robert W. Mackey elected. Now, my friends, Robert W. Mackey was a [illegible] a bank in Pittsburgh. He had [illegible] to have qualities that suited gentlemen who surrounded the [Treas]ury of the State, and he was made State Treasurer. He is there now in office, and asks for a re-election. Unfortunately for General Hartranft, he was Auditor General of the accounts of Pennsylvania. We have but two officers connected with the Treasury of Pennsylvania, the Treasurer and Auditor General. They hold the books, and they hold in a fiduciary capacity the money raised by the taxation of the people. It is a penal offense for the State Treasurer of Pennsylvania to make profit from deposits in the treasury. You will find by an examination of the reports of the Treasurer that from a million and a half to two millions and a half, and sometimes three millions of dollars, are kept in the treasury, and that this ballance is held for the entire year. That money is put out on interest, and thus he is enabled to pay his office and sustain the ring. Very well; in doing this they employed a broker in Philadelphia named Yerkes. I do not speak of what is charged, but of

by the books of Yerkes. This transaction amounted in one year to hundreds of thousands of dollars, and you will mind that Mr. Mackey, State Treasurer, received his share, and unfortunately the candidate for Governor received his share. Now it is said by their party supporters that other men did the very same thing. They say they did no more than other Auditor-Generals and State Treasurers have done. It was the good fortune, then, of those who did it not to be found out; and it will be the pleasure of the people of Pennsylvania, as it is their highest duty, when they are found out, not to give them suffrages and elevate them to higher offices. Now, my friends, I never had the support of the members of this treasury ring, and never had their votes. It was my good fortune not to have their friendship. When I was in England, on my return home, I found what ticket had deen nominated. I made up my mind then that the ticket might be withdrawn, as there seemed to be some arrangement to effect that purpose, and I hoped that it would be; and I have no hesitation in saying to-night if, such a man as Mr. Ketchum or Col. Jordan, who were both candidates, had been nominated at Harrisburg, I would not be in your presence. But if they choose to take a man from that Pennsylvania treasuay combination or ring I would be, insensible to gratitude and imposed in me, if I dared to declare myself in favor of it. I knew very well the penalty of my present course, and I disconnected it before taking the stand I did. I only regret, my friends and neighbors, that it pleased Providence to throw me upon a bed of sickness. I lost nearly a month. If I had had my health and strength I would have traveled from Lake Erie to the Deleware. [Applause.] I have a perfect right to stand by you, fellow citizens of Pennsylvania—a right to affiliate with any party who will purify the government of my State. [Applause.] I have no doubt that to-night I stand in the presence of many of my friends and neighbors who would not have been here if I had not declared these sentiments. I have no doubt if I could look over this crowd and see it I would note the absence of many of my old friends. [Laughter, and a voice, "plenty of new ones in their places."] I accord to every American citizen the right to express his sentiments and exercise the highest, noblest and most sacred duty which an American citizen performs, that of exercising the duty of suffrage. Has it come to this, when a man chooses to cast his ballot from an honest conviction that it is his duty to cast it for the honest men and against the ring surrounding the Treasury of the State, and elbow deep in it, that he is to be denounced. I have no doubt that the word traitor will be freely used. Traitor to Democrats claim and Republicans on the other side, that they are both and separated from all this. I come here after an absence of three years and a half without feeling any of this emotion. I look over the field, and am prepared next Tuesday week to cast my ballot against the candidate of that ring. It is said my friends, if you vote for Buckalew you will vote for traitors, you will vote for rebel sympathizers, you will vote for men who held back during the war. I have heard that before. My friends when the war closed by the courage of the soldiers, it was not by statesmen, not by generals; they did their part, but our Government maintained its integrity by the force, power and courage of men who carried the musket and held the saber. Remember, my friends, that it is not generals, colonels, captains or majors that preserved to us this heritage of liberty and equality which we received from our ancestors, we owe it to

THE COMMON SOLDIER.

Where is he? He is not elevated. He served his country faithfully, and he is now serving his country by his labor. We find when the war closed, the men who clamored most that rebels should be shot were the men who surrounded the camps, who were quartermasters by profession, who bought oats and horses. I could name some of them to you to-night. I could tell you the names of some who fattened on army contracts. Now they call a man who dares assert his independence and his right as an American citizen, a "traitor." [Laughter.] My friends, I know that when the country was bleeding at every pore, when every household had lost its favorites, when there was blood upon every door-sill, when the graves of our brave soldiers were in every cemetery in the State, when every breast blazed with enthusiasm and when the soldier, to save his Government marched into the jaws of death, these men furnished the [illegible] hanging the rebels. Of all the men that were engaged in the war, the most forgiving men were

THOSE WHO FOUGHT IT OUT.

We all advised men to go to the war. I did it with others. The soldiers forgive and forget—real soldiers not the sham soldiers. The real soldier forgot his injuries with the desire to make his country prosperous, to return to friendship for those warring States, to give us peace, heaven-born and blessed peace, and never again return to fierce struggle and sectional hate.

The Governor referred briefly to the importation of negroes into the State for voting purposes, and ended by urging on his hearers the necessity of watching these freedmen, who leave the district of Columbia to work on Cameron's railroad. Mr. Curtin did not foreshadow his policy with regard to his future action on the national question.

PENNSYLVANIA CANVASS.

Gov. Curtin Accepts the Liberal Nomination—A Ringing Letter from the Great War Governor—A Cordial Indorsement of Mr. Buckalew—His Election Necessary for the Success of the Constitutional Convention.

SARATOGA, Sept. 21, 1872.

MY DEAR SIR: Your favor of the 11th inst., informing me of my nomination by the Liberal Republican State Committee as a candidate for Delegate at Large to the Constitutional Convention, and inclosing an address to the people of the State recommending my election, came duly at hand; but extreme illness prevented my reading the letter, or considering the subject, until now. I am still quite feeble, and unable to write without the aid of an amanuensis; but the near approach of the election, and the gravity of the issues, immediately affecting the honor and prosperity of Pennsylvania, to be decided in October, compel me to answer when my rest should be unbroken.

The nomination made by so many of the purest and best of the old representative Republicans of the State, and presented to the people upon grounds which stand out in brave contrast with the demoralized political management now so sadly prevalent, is an appeal I cannot refuse to respect. I therefore accept the nomination, and if it shall be ratified by the people, and health permits, I will discharge its duties with fidelity.

I had confidently expected, immediately upon my return home, to familiarize myself fully with the details of what I well understood in all general aspects, touching the misrule of our Commonwealth under its present political control, and to speak my convictions at the earliest possible moment. While I cannot ever be indifferent in a Presidentiol contest, I felt that the regeneration of my native State, in the October election, was of paramount interest to the people in whose happiness and greatness I am enlisted by every consideration of gratitude and patriotism.

The bad rule that has wholly compassed the channels of political administrative authority in Pennsylvania is not of recent creation. It was the tireless but impotent power that confronted the action of the Government, State and National, during the dark days of civil war, and steadily struggled to gather advancement and gain from the bitter sorrows of the people.

Six years ago it attained control in our State. How it was achieved is remembered in humiliation by all. Why it was sought and won our subsequent history painfully demonstrates. The Republican organization, that has made its name illustrious in maintaining the unity of the States and redeeming a continent to freedom, was seized, in contempt of the will of the people, and its victories perverted to licensed wrong. I need not recite how, under an honored name and flag, it has created widespread, indeed almost universal, distrust of authority, and made honest men despair of integrity in legislation, in elections, in conferring legislative honors, and even in the administration of public justice.

These terrible and steadily-growing evils in our political rule have made the people demand the right to resume their sovereignty, to make new safe guards for themselves; but if the proposed Convention is to effect thorough reform, it must be aided' not hindered' by the vast power of the Executive and other important State officials. If Mr. Buckalew shall be defeated, and a new lease of authority thus confered upon the despotic control that has long misruled the Commonwealth, it will be marvelous indeed if a Convention, chosen in the partisan strife of a National contest, can afford any substantial releaf or protection to the people. If Pennsylvania is to be restored to purity, the Goverment, in all its departments, as well as the Convention, must harmonize fully and earnestly in the work of regeneration. Mr. Buckalew's confessed integrity and consistent devotion to Reform during many years of official service give the best possible guarantees of honest administration and of complete restraints upon corrupt or reckless authority, and his election seems to be demanded by every consideration of individual manhood, and of fidelity to the honor and advancement of the State.

If, as is clamed by the desperate leaders of Pennsylvania, to regenerate our State in October will affect the national contest. the cause thus to be endangered must be wanting in most assential attributes of popular confidence. Acuated solely by a sense of duty to a people, whose devotion in times pest furnishes the most grateful memories of my life, I shall vote in October for honest government in our Commonwealth, and meet the Presidential issue when it comes before the people, in accordance with my long settled convictions. I [illegible] and administrative reform, because a Presidential election is pending.

Lying Extraordinary.—"I have known General Hartranft well, both as a [illegible] officer and a man. As Auditor General he showed himself a most faithful, upright, efficient and accommodating officer."—Chas. R. Buckalew.

The above paragraph is given a prominent place in last week's "Radical." Still, the "Radical," with a disregard of truth that even [illegible] of a sinking cause cannot [illegible], much less excuse, persists in asserting the falsehood.

Why don't Hartranft or his friends arrest Ald. W. W. Daugherty, a prominent citizen of Philadelphia, before whom the affidavits were made, and who publicly certifies to their genuineness? Would they not, if they dared do so, to prop up Hartranft's failing fortunes?

Why has not Hartranft at least made an endeavor to explain on the stump, the disgraceful transactions wherein he has been concerned?

Missed their Man.—For the special benefit of the people of the county of Beaver and the temperance element of said county, I herewith publish the following letter received by me a short time ago: —J. A. Anderson, Esq.

Supreme Council,
Liquor Dealers' Pro'tive Ass'n.
Philadelphia, Sept. 2, 1872.

Mr. Joseph Anderson—Dear Sir:—The undersigned, a Committee on correspondence of the "Liquor Dealers' Protective Association," of Philadelphia, would respectfully request you to use your influence, in co-operation with us, to organize the liquor interest in your county, for the purpose of electing men to the Legislature that will pledge themselves to repeal the Local Option Bill, passed at the last session.

We have an organization in every ward in this city, also, in Pittsburgh and other counties in the State, and we have no doubt that if the proper effort is made throughout the State, we can have the obnoxious law repealed and defeat all fanatical legislation that may conflict with our interests.

As self-preservation is the first law of nature, and in Union there is strength, we, therefore, trust you will use all your influence to organize and protect your own interest, as well as the interests of the entire trade.

If you think favorable of this, please send information to H. P. Reed, Rush House, 807 Arch street, as to how your candidates for Legislature stand on this question.

For the Beaver Argus.

Quite Natural.—The Conservative man not a long time since was at the Doncaster House in Rochester, where he purchased a pint of whisky.—I am sorry to say he forgot to pay for it—Two or three days subsequently to his appearance here, I noticed an article in his penny-a-line sheet, that on his return to Beaver from the Doncaster House, he never saw so many completely drunken men in all his life in going so short a distance. Our advice to the late convert to Grantism, is not to buy quite so much of the "critter" at one time, and then pay for it before going away, and he will not see so many drunken men.

"Something that will not kill before I get to Erie." My tickets out and some of yours. Yours truly, Follow the crowd to J M McCreery & Co's, they do not charge for admission.

The $7,000 Bribe.—It is admitted on all hands that George O. Evans gave this money to Auditor General Hartranft as an official bribe. Even Benjamin H. Brewster, who comes forward as a special advocate of Hartranft, makes this naive admission. What then is there in the character of Hartranft or in the circumstances of the case that relieves the official who accepted this money of the charge of bribery? It is not his character for integrity, for his rapacity and greed are betrayed in his stock gambling transactions with Yerkes and in the admissions of his Oil Creek letter. That Hartranft regards office merely as a means of personal aggrandizement, and that he is unscrupulous as to the processes which he employs, are fully proven in his official career.

In taking this money he was not the dupe of Evans, but of his own covetousness. The looseness of his "official routine," by which one million of assets were placed in the hands of Evans without security arose from the corrupt bargain which antedates the bribe. The absolute silence of the auditor general and his gross dereliction of official duty in neglecting to report Evans to the legislature sprung directly from the bribe. The precipitate manner in which the money was returned only strengthens the proof of Hartranft's guilt. It would be much more easy to maintain that Evans was innocent of bribery in paying the seven thousand dollars than Hartranft was innocent in accepting it.

Sudden Death.—On last Thursday one week ago, Mrs. Hamilton, wife of Mr. Samuel Hamilton, formally of this county, but for some years past a resident of Harrisburg and a clerk in the Surveyor General's office, died very suddenly at her home in that place. She had been unwell but a short time, and her unexpected death was a severe shock to her many relatives and friends in this county. Mrs. Hamilton was about 28 years of age, and was a lady highly esteemed in the northwestern portion of the county, where she resided previous to her marriage. Her corpse was brought from Harrisburg to this place, and interred in the new cemetry here.

Things Have Changed—Consumption.—Hannibal and Cæsar won their victories and battles by the sword, the spear and battle-axe. They had never heard of gun powder. The man who would undertake to do what Grant did at Appomatox and with such implements of warfare as were used then, would deserve to be derided and laughed at: not because they were not used for the purpose then in view, but because, better and more powerful engines were known. We do not lose sight of what the past has done for medicine. The past hundred years has accomplished more towards the cure of consumption, than the five hundred years previously. It is common for people still to die of it. It will continue to be common just so long as people neglect to pay attention to the first symptoms or follow the rule of treatment in vogue a hundred years ago. Dr. Keyser of this place cures nearly every case of lung disease or chronic disease of any kind that he takes under treatment. Dr. Keyser's Lung Cure is as near a specific for consumption as any medicine can be; it will allay ill morbid irritability, quiet the cough, lessen the inflamation, expel the tough, viscid mucous that blocks up the air cells of the lungs, and give that plastic quality to the blood which it needs to fit it for the purposes of reparation. Ask for Dr. Keyser's Lung Cure, at the Doctor's office, No. 167 Liberty street, Pittsburgh. Single bottles $1.50, four bottles for $5. A pamphlet on Chronic Lung Diseases sent free to any address.

Rough on Hartranft.—Last spring after the officers of the Army of the Potomac had got through their business at Cleveland, a number of them had got together in friendly chat; among them were Gen Sol. Meredith and Gen. Hartranft. Meredith was shaking hands and bidding farewell to his brothers-in-arms; and coming to Hartranft, whose name he had forgotten or pretended he had, he took him by the hand, and recollecting he came from Pennsylvania, afforded him the following friendly counsel: "General, when you go back to Pennsylvania, you must induce that thief you have nominated for Governor to withdraw, for we cannot afford to lose the State."

The advice was sound, but don't seem to have been acceptable to the person to whom it was proffered.

Mr. Editor: I had a dream last night that has made such an impression on my mind that I thought I would have it published. This is the dream:

I was in the room occupied by the secretary of the Republican County Committee. I had called to see my friend Curtis, and have a talk with him about his prospects for county Treasurer. I found him very busy sending out documents to prove the honesty of the Ring candidates. I stepped up and took a seat, and said to friend Curtis: "Can you tell how soon your turn will come to fill that important office?"

"Oh, yes," replied Mr Curtis; "that can be told by a little figuring. You see that Beaver county has 3000 Republican voters, and the last time I run I got 77; that would leave but 2930 votes to overcome. You see, Rutan and Quay have promised to support me the next time, and that would foot up 79; and if I can gain two votes every year, you see, by dividing 2930 by 2, that it would take but a trifle over 1200 years for me to accomplish this end."

I said to friend Curtis, after this showing: "That would make you a trifle older than the Buck-eye Black Smith."

"Yes," said he, "it would; but then I have a fine prospect for long life, as light diet is favorable to longevity, and my diet consists principally of Quay and Rutan's promises, and I am satisfied that their promises are very light diet, but it's the best I have."

My friend Curtis and I had become a good deal excited by this time over his bright prospects, and we gave three hearty cheers. And just as we were cheering there was a rap at the door, and to the welcome "come!" Mr Rutan made his appearance. He was all excitement. Said Rutan—

"Have you had good news from the front recently, friend Curtis? How it made my heart rejoice to hear those hearty cheers, it put me so much in mind of the excitement in the hospital when the news of a victory was received. How us fellows in the hospital, and the entire "ambulance corps," would rejoice with our wounded comrades over the victory! Them was glorious times in the hospital."

At this point, friend Quay entered, and said: "Are all here yet, friend Curtis?"

"All but E. B. Williams," replied Curtis."

And, as I was musing over the idea of a Democratic editor being admitted to a Republican committee room, I concluded to just wait and see. After some consultation, the secretary went out and returned with Williams. He came in full of soft-shelled crabs, and was given a chair, so that he could rest his head, and was soon fast asleep.

"All things are ready," said Quay.—"Curtis, you and Rutan must write that reply to W. W. Irwin, in the last Argus, for Williams while he is asleep, and slip it into his breast pocket, so that he will think he did it himself."

At this juncture, Quay and Rutan consulted as to what the secretary should write; and, as a faithful scribe, he wrote what his masters dictated. When it was finished, it was duly folded and put into Williams' editorial pocket. By a little shaking, the Democratic editor was restored to consciousness. Then Quay pulled out his friendly bottle, and we all drank the health of the Ring ticket. Quay said to Williams—

"I say unto you, give it to Irwin. I know you have the article ready, as I see it in your pocket."

At this period I awoke and, behold, it was a dream. DREAMER.

The following extract from a letter of a correspondent to the Cincinnati Commercial may be of interest to any of our readers who may be contemplating making investments in railroad securities:

"Let the reader take a good map of the West and carefully scan the route of the Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western railroad and its feders. Stretching from Indianapolis to Peoria, through what an ex-President of the Ohio State Board of Agriculture assured me is the richest vast section of farming land in the world, a distance of 212 miles; thence controlling northwestwardly the Peoria and Rock Island and the Davenport and St. Paul Railroads, which pass through a country as beautiful and as marvelously rich as the other. The whole distance is over six hundred miles, and the country looks like a garden all the way. Such fields of corn, and wheat, and oats and grass I never saw elsewhere. There are not wanting droves of the blooded cattle, such as one sees in the Blue Grass region of Kentucky, and countless hogs—enough, one would suppose, for the entire Gentile world. Nor must I overlook the attractive farm houses, the extensive orchards, loaded with fruit, and the thriving cities and villages, which one expects to find only in old settled districts. The whole is most extraordinary, and at present the railroad facilities are not sufficient to carry to market the surplus fatness. That difficulty will be removed soon, and then let Cincinnati open her storehouses and increase the number of her elevators.

"But this is only a part of the story. The owners of the Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western Railroad have now nearly completed a branch to Decatur, and are building another from Danville to Paxton, on the Illinois Central, and a main line from Champaign, via Havana, to the Mississippi River. It has not been so announced by those concerned, but I think I can see that the point to be reached is Quincy, and that the Hannibal and St. Joseph Road will be found eventually in this ring, bringing Kansas City, Leavenworth and the Kansas Pacific Railroad next door to Cincinnati. Keokuk will be reached by a branch, and form the link that will connect the East with the road passing through Northern Missouri and Nebraska—the Midland Road—which has been built through the management of Mr. B. E. Smith, the railroad king of Ohio, a man whose success in life has been as remarkable as it is well deserved.

"Here you have a network of roads under one control covering the finest sections of country in the 'boundless West,' capable of feeding the world."

$28,700.—In 1869 Auditor General Hartranft had at one time this amount of the widow and orphan pension fund in his unlawful possession. The letter of Hartranft to Yerkes, dated December 21, 1869, explains the nature of this transaction. It is as follows:

"Auditor General's Office, Harrisburg, December 21, 1869.—Dear Yerkes: Calhoun telegraped me to-day for money, and I had to give a check for $8,700, which he will present to you tomorrow (22d), I cannot avoid this. I met Mackey here on Monday. He went west in the afternoon and will not return until Monday. I did not like to ask him again, but I did not think Calhoun would want any money so soon. I will see you on Saturday, and whatever you want done I will do. I will meet Mackey here on Monday, and whatever is necessary I will ask him to do. Yours, most truly,
"J. F. Hartranft."

"P. S.—Will lift Calhoun's check on Saturday, and give you certificate of deposit to that amount. J. F. H."

Major Calhoun was United States pension agent at Philadelphia in charge of the cases of widows and orphans. John F. Hartranft was one of his sureties, and he wrongfully and dishonestly availed himself of this official relation to Calhoun to get the pension money into his possession for purposes of private speculation. The law requires pension agents and other disbursing officers to keep the public funds for their use at the sub-treasury, and forbids the employment of other depositories. In violation of this wholesome law and at the instigation of General Hartranft, Major Calhoun withdrew this money from the sub-treasury at Philadelphia and deposited it with Yerkes.

By this action the accounts of Major Calhoun at the sub-treasury became embarrassed and confused. The letter to Yerkes shows how hard he was pressed for money. More than once the poor pensioners were compelled to wait in Philadelphia at expense and inconvenience for their money, while Hartranft was using it in lawless speculations. The result was that Major Calhoun was dismissed from the post of pension agent.

Sub Treasurer George Eyster, the brother-in-law of Senator Scott, was familiar with these operations in the pension fund between Hartranft and Calhoun, and he vehemently opposed the nomination of Hartranft for Governor for fear that history would reach the ear of the public. Senator Scott, who was doubtless, put in possession of these facts by his brother-in-law, also opposed the nomination of Hartranft, as he has since declared in a speech in Harrisburg. But Senator Scott and his brother-in-law now have reasons for desiring the election of Hartranft which conflict with the interests of the people. If General Hartranft's connection with Calhoun in this lawless transaction rendered him unfit for the nomination of governor in the eyes of Senator Scott, does it not render him equally unworthy of election? It is for the people of Pennsylvania to decide whether a greedy speculator in the pension funds of the widows and orphans shall hold the honorable and responsible position of chief magistrate.

M'CLELLAND'S RECORD.

The following shows how Mr. M'Clelland in both sessions of the 42d Congress voted on the various resolutions and bills affecting the interests of his constituents. He is perfectly willing that every man should see and understand his official conduct, add therefore the following abstract is laid before the public. The business men of this district would do well to look at his record themselves, and not take anybody's word in regard to the same.

We defy any one to point to a single word which he has ever uttered, or a solitary vote which he has ever given, that is in any way detrimental to the interests of his constituents, and especially to our varied and growing manufacturing interests. Business men ponder:

Mackey.—Some of Mr. Mackey's friends have been indiscretly telling tales out of school. It will be remembered by all our readers that, at the time "Dear Yerkes" failed, he had in his hands $165,000 belonging to the State. The State Treasurer, not wishing any investigation as to the reason why so large an amount of public funds were placed in the hands of a young and irresponsible PRIVATE broker, and not caring to have his relations with Yerkes exposed, quietly succeeded—with the assistence of the Cameron and other friends—in replacing the money in the treasury. Quite recently, one of Mr. Mackey's friends in Pittsburgh became confidential, while discussing oysters and politics with an associate, and unfolded the scheme whereby "Bob" is to be re-imbursed. Mackey is to withdraw in favor of the next strongest candidate for State treasurer, and throw his influence in his behalf, with the understanding, however, that such candidate's friends shall vote for a resolution providing for the re-payment to Mackey of the $165,000. This scheme is, of course, predicated upon the hoped-for election of Hartranft and Allen, as of course Mr. Buckalew would never sign a bill for such a purpose. Voters of Pennsylvania, will it pay to vote for Hartranft? Do you wish to make up Robert W. Mackey's losses in stock speculations, entered into and conducted with your money? Answer at the Polls!

More Deviltry on Foot—The People to be Robbed in Another Way.—It is stated authoritatively now that Mackey will not be a candidate for State Treasurer next winter, but the additional facts have been developed that he is to name his successor, and an act is to be passed by the Legislature indemnifying Mackey for the loss sustained by that gentleman through the Yerkes failure. That loss amounts to $165,000, and of course if the bill goes through the money is to come out of the State Treasury. Mackey loaned this sum to Yerkes from the State funds, in violation of law; Yerkes failed and Mackey was in for the amount. Himself and bondsmen now intend that the people shall foot the bill. They will have to do this unless Buckalew is elected Governor of the State. As Governor, he will veto all bills tending in that direction, and it is not at all probable that there will be scoundrels enough in the Legislature to pass bills of that character over the Governor's head. A vote for Hartranft, therefore is a vote for the State to lose that $165,000. A vote for Buckalew is a vote to save it, and to oblige the gamblers who lost it to pay it themselves. Voters of Beaver county, if you approve of violations of law and fraudulent transactions through which you are robbed of your hard earned money, vote for Mackey's candidate for Governor; if, on the other hand you believe in the "old Joe. Ritner" kind of honesty, cast your ballot against him and vote for Buckalew for Governor and Hartley for Auditor General.

My Dear Sir:—It has been hinted by some few Republicans in our town that I would not support the candidates of our temperance men running on the Prohibition ticket.

I beg leave to notify the Prohibition party at large, that it is my intention to support the Prohibition party, and use my utmost influence to assist in securing the election of their candidates, from Hon. James Black, candidate for President, down to the last man on the county ticket.

I beg that no man of principle and honor, will allow any other impression to pervade him; and just now I would say that men of both the Democratic and Republican parties, would do well to vote for S. B. Chase, our candidate for Governor; his superior fitness and competency of the three candidates for the office, having been long ago conceded. But sir, my personal disgust for the Republican candidate, and even the expression of such disgust, can never be construed to evince my intention, or even disposition, to vote for the Democratic candidate for Governor.

I am, my dear sir,
Yours very respectfully,
Benj. Rush Bradford.

P. S. Since penning the above, I learn that some would be social pugilist has procured, and is circulating, a fourteen year old petition for the granting of a license, to which my name is signed. Now, Mr. Editor, is it necessary for me to say that I am not in anxiety about its doing me any harm?

I am at all times prepared for personal attacks, and shall not be surprised with the novelty of a thing of this kind in our town. B. R. B.

Persecuted Innocence.—Here is the pathetic appeal which Hartranft and Mackey made for the pardon of their "dear Yerkes:"

To His Excellency, John W. Geary, Governor of Pennsylvania.

Dear Sir: We would respectfully request your Excellency to grant a pardon to Charles T. Yerkes, jr., who has been convicted of larceny in the Court of Quarter Session of Philadelphia. It is our firm conviction, and we speak advisedly when we say that we believe him to be entirely free from any intention to commit a felony, and think that to incarcerate him would be an act of great injustice. He is largely indebted to the city of Philadelphia, and has made a proposition for a settlement with said city, which proposition has been accepted by the Committee appointed by Councils to settle the same and consisting of gentlemen who have the entire regard and confidence of the people. We, therefore, from the belief in his innocence, and that to pardon him for the offense charged would be for the public good, earnestly desire that you now show your Executive clemency in this case. Yours, most truly,
J. F. Hartranft.
R. W. Mackey.

Isn't it strange, that of all men in Pennsylvania, only J. F. Hartranft and R. W. Mackey could be found to disagree with the court and jury that convicted Yerkes, and to allege, "that to incarcerate him would be an act of great injustice." They don't, however, think so much of "Dear Yerkes' since he permitted his books and papers, and their friendly epistles to go before the public.

New Brighton, Sept. 30, 1872.

Mr. Editor, and the Republican party of this Senatorial District Greeting:

I make this last appeal to you prior to depositing in the ballot-box your decision whether the personal rule of Simon Cameron and his trained bands of dishonest men, who surround every Court House in this State, shall be perpetuated, or whether an honest administration of the State government shall again rule. We can and shall succeed in re-establishing the latter if we are true and earnest workers from now until the election.

I call the people of this county and of the State to witness, that in no public trust—in any capacity where trust has been imposed upon me—has it ever been betrayed. I served the people of Beaver county three years as Sheriff; six years I served the State in a military capacity under command of the generous, patriotic and noble-hearted Curtin—who was betrayed and sold to that old political thief, Simon Cameron, by your trusted Representative from Beaver county at that time (M. S. Quay), and the one who now seeks, through the money his chief has defrauded the public out of, to send to the State Senate such brainless and unprincipled tools as J. S. Rutan, in order that old Simon (or some one of his rascally crew) may again be sent to the United States Senate; thus insuring the "little corporal" the control of the post-offices and other appointments in this district, and enable him to make money and influence by their sale.

I was taught in childhood never to fail in the performance of my duty. I have tried to adhere to this lesson, and my fellow-citizens will concede that in the main I have been successful, the foul calumnies of that pestiferous and libelous sheet—The Beaver Conservative—edited by J.S.Rutan, the diarrhœa and ambulance-brigade soldier-candidate for State Senator in this district, to the contrary notwithstanding.

During the three years I was Sheriff of Beaver county I resided in the jail. During that time I recollect of Rutan's occupying a cell in that institution but one night. That was while he was district attorney. Several men were in prison for an alleged violation of the liquor law, and had smuggled some "shut-eye" into their cells. They sent for Rutan. He came, partook of the "Oh-be-joyful," and slept off his inebriation in one of the prison cells. The promise of secrecy on the part of the prisoners secured the entrance of a nolle prosequi in their respective cases subsequently. But, Rutan claimed to be a temperance man at that time, and still does. He is a fraud! That covers the whole ground.

Four successive weeks Rutan took occasion to slander me through the Conservative before I was made aware of the fact that he acted under cover of Williams as editor of that paper. I then wrote and had published a communication in which I showed him up in his true colors before the people, and promised to follow him up until the election. I shall redeem my pledge, as I always do. I wish to be faithful to my fellow-citizens, I always have been, and shall continue so to be. I have had opportunities of becoming better acquainted with the rascalities of old Simon and his little corporal Quay—who owns and controls Rutan—than any other man in this section of the State; and I feel it a duty I owe my fellow-citizens to expose them. I have observed the movements of this rascally ring at Harrisburg, and have been fighting their thieving and fraudulent schemes for plundering the treasury and keeping themselves in power, for the past ten years. Why, Old Simon and his gang of swindlers are capable of stealing Tammany and all its plunder and selling them before breakfast of a morning, only afford them the opportunity.

Cameron bought M. S. Quay in 1867, and he has been his willing tool ever since; is regularly employed as a lobyist at Harrisburg to buy up just such marketable legislators as J. S. Rutan. All you have to do to perpetuate the power of this gang of political robbers is to re-elect J. S. Rutan and other ring candidates to the Senate and House of Representatives. By so doing you will in effect say you are content that Old Simon shall continue to disgrace Pennsylvania in the U. S. Senate; that Mackey is welcome to speculate on the State funds, and Quay to crack his whip over the Republican party in Beaver county. Rutan, the bungler, will become one of your law-makers, and claim a pre-emption right to slander and abuse his neighbors at will as editor of the vilest newspaper ever tolerated in a moral and religious community—The Beaver Conservative. I have a sure and safe detective, who informs me that Rutan edits that paper.

Wm. B. Dunlap, esq., is, and I believe always has been a Democrat; but he is an honest, conscientious, common-sense gentleman, of good education and address, reared in a Christian manner, with no black marks against his character. There is not a man in this Senatorial district, acquainted with J. S. Rutan, who would risk his veracity by endorsing the above characteristics as attaching to him. Voters! choose ye, between them—a gentleman of ability, integrity and honesty on one side, and a fraud on the other. The one would legislate intelligently and honestly, the other to cover old frauds and open the door for new ones.

Will some one inform us what two gentlemen from Beaver county, on returning from the Philadelphia National Convention, via Reading, stopped over night at the latter place, with a couple of frail fair ones? I know. I am posted. Pimps, gamblers, and Legislative roosters have been my study—in self defence—for some time.

Rutan, through the last smut-machine of Beaver, charges me with malfeasance in office. During eleven years of public service—three, as Sheriff of Beaver county; six, as Commissary General and Chairman of the Court of Claims, and two as State Treasurer—I dare, I defy the whole clan—from the old swindler, Simon Cameron, down to his little corporal, M S Quay—to point to one act of dereliction of duty, or official misconduct. The treasury robbers can substantiate no such charge against me. My record is clear because it is honest. Quay and Rutan dare not attack me through the Radical; but, coward-like, they endeavor to stab through the Conservative, a sheet which they purchased with the funds filched from the "unexpended balance" of the peoples' money which ought to be in the vaults of the State Treasury.

The man, J S Rutan, who asks the votes of the electors of this Senatorial district, is not reliable. Quay owns him, and Quay is owned by Simon Cameron, who is one of the greatest swindlers and treasury-robbers in the Union. No one will vote for Rutan unless he wears the collar of the ring, obeys the "little corporal," and disregards the solemn duty he owes his state—to protect, defend and perpetuate its free institutions.

How Rutan electioneers: The following letter was handed to me, with the privilege of publication. It is but a sample of many addressed to supposed purchaseable voters throughout the District:

"September 20th, 1872.

Dear Sir:—I am compelled to go to Pittsburgh this morning. I have no money except as I borrow it; and cannot afford to spend much. I enclose five dollars to pay you for any out-lay you may have made on my account. This campaign is costing me more than I expected, and I must retrench. I am satisfied I can win, and there is no necessity for extra efforts. Accept my thanks for your services. Yours, J. S. Rutan."

Mr. Editor, you are at liberty to exhibit the original letter to all who have the curiosity to see it. Those who are acquainted with Rutan's writing, will recognize it at once.

Every effort possible is now being made to trade off candidates on the ring ticket for voters for Rutan. This game is an old one, and will be played to the utmost extent this fall. I did all I was able last fall to beat Dr. Shurlock and J. R. Harrah, and my efforts together with those of hundreds of other good and true men of the county, were crowned with success. We voted openly and squarely for two respectable democrats for the positions they sought to fill—not sneakingly and hypocritically, as Quay and Rutan did in 1869, and as they are now endeavoring to do to secure the election of that treacherous, venal ring-man, Rutan, to the State Senate.

No man, if warned against by one in whom he placed confidence, would employ an embezzler as a private agent for the transaction of his business. I have lived all my life among my fellow-citizens of Beaver county. I have never deceived them. They know it. I therefore feel it my duty to warn them against voting for Rutan—a buckeye and a fraud; a venal slave of the Cameron robber ring—as State Senator. If you elect him you will do it with your eyes open, and you will regret it only when you suffer from his treachery; as he will most certainly sell you to the highest bidder.

Quay says he will support the entire Republican ticket, this fall, at least. Look at a May number of the Radical for this declaration. I have to say that I was guilty of forcing M S Quay upon the favor of the great and good Curtin, whom he betrayed to Cameron for a price. For the sake of decency and propriety I sincerely trust he will not desecrate that great name by mentioning it in his black mail sheet. You know your own infamy, Quay; and I hope you will never again write or print the name of Andrew Curtin, the greatest war Governor of all the States.

Simon Cameron.—On the 20th day day of April, 1862, immediately after President Lincoln, in obedience to his own sense of duty, and the demand of an indignant nation, had dismissed Simon Cameron from his cabinet in disgrace, the Congress of the United States (then, as ever since, largely Republican) gave him the parting compliment contained in the following resolution:

Resolved, That Simon Cameron, late Secretary of War, by investing Alexander Cummings with control of large sums of public money and authority to purchase military supplies, without restriction, without requiring from him any guarantee for the faithful performance of his duties, when the services of competent public officers were available and by involving the Government in a vast number of contracts with persons not legitimately engaged in the business pertaining to the subject-matter of such contracts, especially in the purchase of arms for future delivery, has adopted a policy highly injurious to the public service, and deserves the censure of the House.

Time and again Mr. Cameron has vainly attempted to have the resolution repealed, it still remains on the Journal of the House of Representatives of the thirty-seventh Congress, and will remain as long as we send men to Washington who are unwilling to have it recorded that they deem dishonesty a virtue. Not satisfied with disgracing Pennsylvania by his conduct in the first Republican President's Cabinet, he subsequently bought a seat in the United States Senate where he is pointed out to-day as an instance of what money can do to elevate dishonest men to high positions in "the prayer founded State." Were this all, were Simon Cameron content to represent, or rather misrepresent the grand old Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in the Senate of the United States, there would perhaps be no occasion to evoke from the past the facts which spread his infamy and bear witness to our shame; but he must, it seems, govern the State hereafter. Contrary to the wishes of the Republican masses, disregarding the earnest protests of the Republican press, he caused a man to be nominated for the position of Governor who had just been tried and convicted for dishonesty and incompetency by a Republican investigating committee. It was supposed, and openly asserted by the men who nominated Hartranft and Allen, that their records would be overlooked or ignored in the excitement and enthusiasm of a presidential campaign. Republicans of Beaver county, are you willing to aid Simon Cameron and his followers in their corrupt schemes and in bringing further disgrace on your State? Every man who votes for Hartranft and Allen necessarily does this. Let us, whether for Greeley or Grant in November, teach our State politicians, on the second Tuesday in October, that the eighth commandment is not yet obsolete.

Don't fail to call at the Cheap Store before making your purchases. W. A. Smith always sells at the lowest prices.

A Correction.—We were laboring under a misapprehension last week when we stated that the "Arlington estate bill", never went beyond the U. S. Senate. It was also brought up in the House, and Capt. McClelland gives its history in that body, in last week's "New Castle Guardian." It is as follows:

"Editor Guardian: In your paper of last week appears the following:

"If Capt. McClelland is re-elected he will owe it to the votes of Republicans of Lawrence county, and are they prepared, by so voting, to indorse the proposal to pay the heirs of Robt. E. Lee $300,000 for the Arlington estate?"

I do not wish, Mr. Editor, to occupy too much space in your paper, but I desire sufficient to vindicate myself. First I quote from the official proceedings of Congress as published in the 'Congressional Globe' under date of March 13, 1871:

ARLINGTON ESTATE.

Mr. BRAXTON introduced a bill (H. R. No. 43) for quieting the title of the Arlington estate, in the county of Alexandria, State of Virginia, and making an appropriation therefor; which was read a first and second time.

Mr. BRAXTON.—I move that the bill with the accompanying memorial be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and printed.

Mr. STEVENSON.—I ask that the bill be read.

The bill was read. It provides that on a full release and conveyance of all right, title and interest, at law and in equity, by the devisees under the last will and testament of George W. P. Custis, deceased, in the tract of land called "Arlington," containing eleven hundred acres, and situate in the county of Alexandria and State of Virginia, the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the said devisees the sum of $300,000, which payment when made shall be in full consideration for the said property. The 2d section provides that this bill shall be in force from and after its passage.

Mr. STOUGHTON.—I move as an amendment that the bill be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The question was put on the amendment, and there were—ayes 35, nays 64; no quorum voting.

Mr. STOUGHTON.—I move that the bill be rejected.

The SPEAKER.—The gentleman is too late. The Chair will order tellers.

Mr. Braxton and Mr. Stoughton were appointed tellers.

The House again divided and the tellers reported that there were—ayes 29, noes 77. During the division by tellers,

Mr. HOAR said:—I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Is it in order to move to lay this bill upon the table?

The SPEAKER.—That motion will be in order after the result of the division of the House by tellers has been announced.

The result by tellers having been announced as above,

Mr. STOUGHTON.—I call for the yeas and nays on my motion that the bill be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs when appointed.

Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts.—I move that the bill be laid on the table, and upon that motion I call for the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered. The question was taken, and it was decided in the affirmative—yeas 115, nays 74; not voting 34.

So the bill was laid on the table.

* * * * *

This question was one that should not have been presented at all. I told Mr. Braxton so at the time, and also that I would VOTE AGAINST any such proposition no matter by whom advocated. I considered if the heirs of General Lee desired a return of his estate, or any consideration in lieu therefor, the only place for them to apply was to the Courts—not to Congress. Without discussion I did not know anything as to the merits of the bill and, after its introduction, I would have voted for its reference (Mr Braxton's motion) to the Judiciary Committee which, as appointed by Mr. Speaker Blaine, consisted of six Republicans and three Democrats. It is presumable that with such a committee no rebel could much advantage. I voted for the amendment of Mr. Stoughton (Rep.) to refer to the Committee on Military Affairs; which, likewise consisted of six Republicans and three Democrats. The amendment was lost, and pending the motion to refer to the Judiciary Committee, Mr. Butler moved that the bill be laid upon the table. Against this last I voted, not because I was in favor of paying Mrs. Lee anything. I was satisfied that the Judiciary Committee would make no report until after a most thorough examination of the claim. I submit to all fair-minded people that that was the proper Committee to which such a proposition should be referred.

No other proposition relating to the "Arlington estate" was introduced during the present Congress; so, the charge so frequently made on the streets of New Castle that I "had voted to disinter the Union and Confederate dead buried on the Arlington property and return it to Mrs. Lee" is groundless.

It does seem strange, Mr. Editor, that after living in Lawrence county all my life, except the four years I was in the army, it should be necessary for me to establish my loyalty among my neighbors, especially when it has been called in question by a hired slanderer imported into this district to throw dirt on me. I mean the person calling himself the "Buckeye Blacksmith." He states what is false when he says he asked me certain questions. I could not, therefore, have answered him in any way.

In conclusion allow me to say it would be no discredit to any one to be defeated by a high-minded, honorable and Christian gentleman as I know Mr. Moore to be, of whom Mr. Black, the editor of the Gazette has truthfully said: "He is a scholar, a gentleman, and a man of dignity, who scorns to stoop so low as to indulge in personal abuse."

Mr. Editor, I thank you for the privilege of setting myself right before the public. W. McCLELLAND.

Buckalew Poor.—Charles R. Buckalew, although in public life for more than twenty years, is to-day a poor man. John F. Hartranft, on a petty salary of $2,000, has in a few years amassed a large fortune. Does not the latter evince a little too much business shrewdness to be trusted further in official position. Remember the Governor is ex-officio, one of the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund.

$681,230.54.—John F. Hartranft's stock account with Yerkes for 1871, beginning January 30th and closing October 21st, of that year, (about the time Yerkes failed,) amounted to $681,230.54. How many accounts of a similar character he has with other private brokers entrusted with State funds, will only be known when Charles R. Buckalew is elected Governor and Hartranft and Mackey's dealings are thoroughly investigated.

HAMILTON—In the city of Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 19th ult., of malignant erysypelas, Mrs. Maggie A., wife of Mr. Samuel Hamilton, in the 29th year of her age.

The deceased was the daughter of Robt. Bradshaw, esq. of South Beaver Tp., Beaver Co., Pa. While yet young she became a member, by profession of her faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, of the Presbyterian church of New Salem, which profession she avowed until her death, by a consistent walk in the world.

In 1869 she became the wife of Mr. Hamilton, who was then, and still is, a clerk in the Surveyor General's office in Harrisburg. She then took her certificate from New Salem, and with her husband became a member of the 2d Presbyterian church in that city.

Her sufferings in her last illness were great, but of short duration; for one week sufficed for the malignant disease to do its work, and then in truly christian submission she bowed to the will of God, and fell asleep in Jesus. Her remains, having rested in the hospitable home of the Hon. J. S. Rutan during the funeral services, which were conducted by Rev. James M. Shields, and Rev. W. H. Locke, were laid in the beautiful cemetery to sleep the years away until Christ shall call them forth glorified in body like unto his own.

During the funeral services, a large concourse of friends and neighbors mingled their sympathies with Mr. Hamilton in his great and sudden bereavement. She left an only child, Etta May, 13 months old, who has yet to learn the terrible loss of a christian mother.

The following beautiful and appropriate verses began the solemn funeral services.

"Asleep in Jesus! blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake or weep;
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the last of foes.

Asleep in Jesus! Oh how sweet
To be for such a slumber meet!
With holy confidence to sing
That death hath lost its venomed sting."

PENNSYLVANIA'S SHAME.

Personal Reminiscences of the "Cameron Ring" Plots and Counterplots.

A correspondent of the New York Sun lately sought out General Irwin, late State Treasurer, at his home near Brighton, in Beaver county, and recites the following as the result of an interview with him. Speaking of the election for United States Senator in the spring of 1869, he says:

"Just before the Legislature assembled, sometime during the holidays, I was in Harrisburg, and while I was at the depot a messenger from General Cameron found me, and said I was wanted up in the railroad office very much. I went up to Don Cameron's rooms over the depot, and there I found Simon and Don. The old man opened the conversation by saying that they wanted to make some arrangement with me about the State moneys. If I would dismiss Mr. Taggart, my cashier, and take a man he would name, and give his three banks control of the money in the Treasury they would not oppose my re-election.

"They had a Senatorial fight on hand, and they would rather be on good terms with me, if it was possible. I replied that I had always treated them as I had other citizens of the Commonwealth; that their banks had received all that I considered them entitled to. I was not disposed to dismiss Mr. Taggart who had proved himself a capable and honest man, to take one of his creatures; and I thought he was demanding rather too much for his friendship. Cameron replied, that they could use a great deal of money in their railroad and iron works; that they had had that accommodation from the Treasurer, and they must have it in the future. They could make me more money in one year than I could make out of the Treasurership in ten. If I were sensible and would take his advice, I would have nothing to fear. They would always stand by me and my friends.

"To all this I replied that I did not intend to change my policy to suit their conveniences, but to go on as I had commenced. I was the servant of the people, and had no right to make any such arrangement with them. 'All right,' said Cameron; 'then you do not intend to accommodate your friends.' I replied that I could not see where the friendship came in. I was elected in 1868, when they had done everything they could to defeat me, and I knew it was for no particular love that they entertained toward me that induced them to make this proposition. This ended the interview. I knew what I had to expect, but I got rather more than I bargained for.

AN INTERESTING STORY.

"The session of the Legislature was drawing to a close. The members who had been bought, had been continually dunning Don Cameron for the money promised, but none had been forthcoming. Some arrangement must be made, because his word was pledged, and little as he would scruple to forfeit this pledge in ordinary transactions, he couldn't afford to do it in a case of this kind, because the 'Cameron Ring' is always wanting favors from the Legislature always wanting to control the State Treasury. They knew they would have a fight the next year with me, and if their arrangements were not fulfilled, there would be trouble in the camp. Tom Scott was firm in his refusal to come down. The Northern Central couldn't be used, and the Camerons never liked to pay out their own money. In this dilemma M. S. Quay, of Beaver county, one of Cameron's fuglemen, and a very shrewd, smart fellow, applied to me to make matters all right.

"He always pretended to be a friend of mine, and although I knew he had sold me out time and again, I had never allowed either him or the So one day, toward the close of the session, Quay quietly walked into the Treasury building, seated himself in my office and began a commonplace conversation. In the course of it he very quietly remarked that the Camerons were sorry that they had made any fight against me. They saw their mistake now, and were sorry for it; but everything could be made right; there was no reason why I should harbor ill-will; they were anxious to be on friendly terms with me, and all I had to do was to accept their advances, and I could be re-elected after Mackey's one year had expired. I was a little incredulous, and was not inclined to accept this story. But Quay assured me that he came from Don Cameron, and was authorized to make this statement. They wanted to have an understanding and fix up everything.

"There was ANOTHER LITTLE ARRANGEMENT, which Don Cameron and I Quay had fixed up, which if it had worked all right, would have afforded them the means of getting out of this scrape. It was this: A bill had been prepared in room 42, Girard House, Philadelphia. It was to place a State tax of one cent per gallon on every gallon of oil produced in the State of Pennsylvania, and authorize the State Treasurer and Auditor General to appoint inspectors and collectors, and thus get the control of the revenue derived from this source in the hands of two of Camerons creatures. The snake in this bill came in, in a certain clause which allowed a drawback of three-quarters of a cent on all oil shipped from Philadelphia. The 'Ring' intended to buy up all the oil in the State and ship it to Philadelphia first, and thence ship it to any point where it can be sold. This would allow them, of course, three-quarters of a cent margin on every gallon, and would have raised them a million and three-quarters every year.

"Failing to secure the influence of others in the matter, their only hope was to make a compromise with me, and so Quay tried his powers of persuasion, but in vain. I told him that I had found out all I wished to know, and Don Cameron and his friends might go to a warmer climate for all I cared.

"I sent a dispatch to Mr. William Phillips, the President of the Allegheny Valley Railroad, telling him if he wished to get his bonds he had better look after them immediately. The result was the Attorney General in a few days prepared an opinion affirming the constitutionality of the act authorizing the transfer of the bonds. Everything worked to a charm, and a week or ten days before the expiration of my term as Treasurer, everything had been arranged and the bonds transferred in due form to the Allegheny Valley railroad. It was all done so quietly and neatly that neither Quay nor the Camerons knew what was going on, although Don Cameron was president of the Northern Central railroad and was required to sign a guarantee of the bonds.

AN ASTONISHED CAMERONIAN.

"On the morning of the 1st of May, Quay came into my office and entered into a conversation with Mr. Taggart, the cashier. After talking a few moments he said: 'By the way, Taggart, has anything been done about those Allegheny railroad bonds?' 'Oh, yes,' said Taggart. 'What has been done?' anxiously queried Quay. 'They have been transferred.' 'They have!' exclaimed Quay. 'When was it done?'—'About ten days ago.' 'Well,' said Quay, 'if Irwin isn't the biggest lunkhead I ever saw. Don Cameron would have given him $50,000 if he had let that little job alone, and I told him so. He never will learn any sense,' and rushed out of the building and posted down to the Northern Central railroad office to tell Don Cameron this last great misfortune which had befallen them and destroyed all their hopes."

THE PITTSBURGH COMMERCIAL.

"It is the Right and Duty of Republicans to put down an Unfit Nomination."

The Ring managers of this campaign are circulating the Pittsburgh Commercial as a campaign document in the interests of Hartranft. It is Bob Mackey's home organ. It is filled with the most servile defenses of the Treasury Ring of which Cameron, Hartranft and Mackey are leading members. It is now edited by C. D. Brigham. It was edited by C. D. Brigham in 1870. It has not changed editor, but it has changed principles. Only two years ago it was, west of the Alleghenies, what The Express was east of the Alleghenies—the only journal which had the honesty and independance to make a square and effective fight against the Treasury Ring. The editor then declared The Express was the only really honest independent Republican journal east of the Alleghenies, which was never afraid to denounce corruption wherever found. It was an outspoken defender of Hon. Esaias Billingfelt in all his reform measures relating to the Treasury. It over an over again endorsed him as an honest man and an able and faithful legislator.

A copy of the Commercial of January 13, 1870, now lies before us. It contains a full report of the proceedings which culminated in the memorable defeat of Mackey and the Cameron Treasury Ring, in which can be found full and explicit answers to the libels of the Lancasser Examiner in regard to his action in that contest, and, from which we may quote hereafter. The same issue contains two editorials on the result, one of which we reproduce, and for which we ask the careful perusal of those who have been furnished with campaign copies of the Commercial of a late issue, containing laudations of that same Treasury Ring, asking them to remember that the same C. D. Brigham who edited that paper in 1870 is its editor to-day. We will print the other editorial, still stronger in support of our position, in our next:

[From the Pittsburgh Commercial, Jan. 13, 1870.]

"FOR ONCE THE CAMERONS have been beaten and driven from the field. Although able to control the machinery of the caucus, that Ring cannot control the people. WHEN THE MORAL SENTIMENT OF THE MASSES CAN BE BROUGHT TO BEAR AGAINST THEM THEY GO TO THE BOTTOM. For a long time the Republican party endorsed their practices, but there came a time when rebellion was justifiable. The shackles, once broken, can never again be riveted on the limbs and consciences of the party. New life will be infused in to the organization by the result on the Treasury question, which is in every light auspicious and gratifying. There is a moral sentiment in politics as well as in other affairs of men, which must be respected—a lesson which the Cameron and Ring men in general, it is presumed, by this time understood. In breaking 'the Mackey slate' and rising superior to the behest of the caucus, Republicans have achieved a triumph of inestimable importance. It is the right and the duty of the Republicans to put down an unfit nomination for which the Commercial has long and earnestly labored. The assertion of this principle became necessary for the preservation of republican principles. Its signal triumph at the capital will go very far toward purifying the political atmosphere. In elevating the standard of the party, bad men necessarily go down. Eminently is it so in this instance, and in the general joy we mingle our congratulations and have the only reward we desire or hoped for."

The Commercial has not changed its editor. It has changed its principles. We leave it for the honest Republicans of Lancaster county to say whether they will follow the teachings of C. D. Brigham, the honest opponent of the Cameron Treasury teachings of C. D. Brigham, the convert to Cameron Treasury Ring rule in 1872, and to judge for themselves the nature of the influence which has caused him to turn such a disgraceful summersault within the short period of two years.—Lancaster Express.

THE PITTSBURGH COMMERCIAL.

Its Honest Sentiments About King Caucus and the Treasury Ring.

Since the Treasury Ring managers are taking such pains to circulate the Pittsburgh Commercial since its editor has gone to the embrace of Cameron, Hartranft & Co., it is well enough to keep Republicans posted as to its sentiments when it was yet an independent and honest journal. Here is another of its vigorous and high-toned editorals, which we commend to the consideration of the only Ring organ here which now quotes so freely from the Commercial in its new role:

[From the Pittsburgh Commercial, Jan 11, 1870.]

THE STATE TREASURERSHIP.

The Legislature, on the third ballot yesterday, elected Gen. W. W. IRWIN State Treasurer, over ROBERT W. MACKEY, by nine majority. Fifteen Republicans refused to be bound by the caucus nomination of Mr. MACKEY—in making which all or nearly all of them took no part and adhered to Gen. IRWIN. The Democrats, after voting for their candidate, Mr. BARR, cast their votes for Gen. IRWIN, and a result was thus achieved that will create in the heart of the Republican masses of Pennsylvania more genuine joy than has for a long time been felt there. The news of the defeat of Mr. Mackey will spread throughout the state as glad tidings inaugurating a new era in our state politics and a proclamation from its Capital that a nomination not fit to be made though sanctioned by fifty caucuses, it is the right and duty of Republicans to put down. Those Republicans in the Legislature who have acted up to this line stand on high ground. They occupy an impregnable position, supported by well-defined, openly expressed, perfectly unmistakable popular sentiment. Mr. Mackey's caucus nomination was obtained by controlling the machinery which has been broken in a thousand pieces; and the example will be every where imitated whenever moral principle and the good of the party require it.

The result and the manner of it are strictly in accordance with the bold suggestion of Governor Geary in his message. After tersely enumerating some of the most glaring of the reasons for reforming the Treasury system and the abuses which surround the annual struggle for the office, the Governor said:

"Then in the name of the good people of Pennsylvania, I call upon the members of the Legislature, without distinction of party, to rise above the murkiness of the polluted atmosphere of the past to the true dignity of manhood and exalted patriotism, and purify the election of Treasurer as well as that of every officer within this Commonwealth, and punish every one who tampers with the purity of elections. And then every one who shall have performed his whole duty to sustain the true interests of the State, and to maintain the high dignity of her character, may return unpolluted and with a clear conscience to his constituents, who will received him with open arms, and with joyful exclamation of well done, good and faithful servant.'"

This invitation to act "without distinction of party" was promptly accepted by a sufficient number of the Representatives of both parties, and the Treasury "Ring" have been taught a lesson which they will never forget. The occasion called for the exercise of the qualities of boldness and honesty; and right well have those Republicans who accepted the call of the Governor, and refused to bow to the tyranny of caucus, done their duty. The Republican masses, the whole people at home, and everywhere, will applaud and sustain them.

Gen. Irwin is a Republican without reproach. After holding the office one year, with credit to himself and advantage to the State, he was defeated for a second term by the most corrupt combination our State has ever known. A whole year was spent by the Treasury Ring perfecting plans for "putting the Mackey slate through." All their plans have failed, to the utter dismay of the actors in the plot. Their insolence and corrupt practices have been properly rebuked by the people.

—The agents of Hartranft did a very disreputable trick the other evening, in employing boys from the public schools to follow up the carriers of The Express and throw a copy of the Campaign Edition of the Commercial into everey house The Express was left. The trick was quite as mean, if not as dishonest, as if they had stolen a copy of our subscription list and used it for that purpose. But those who received copies of that paper in this disreputable manner, can judge how much reliance should be placed on what it now says, after reading its honest sentiments as above printed.—Lancaster Express.

HONEST MEN, READ!

What Republicans Say of the Evans Ring Candidate for Governor.

There is a great deal of dissatisfaction with the Republican State Ticket, viz. HARTRANFT, BY HIS CONNECTION WITH THE EVANS SWINDLE, AND ALLEN, BECAUSE OF HIS VOTES FOR THE NINE MILLION STEAL.—Lancaster Volksfreund.

We regret that as long as Auditor General Hartranft was on the stand before the Evans Investigating Committee HE DID NOT TELL ALL HE KNEW concerning the affair.—Pittsburgh Gazette.

Your committee have not language sufficiently strong to express their disapprobation of so bold an outrage, or fitting terms in which to characterize THOSE IN OFFICIAL POSITION WHO SEEK TO PALLIATE OR EXCUSE THE WRONG.—Hon. Jas. L. Graham.

If they are not disproved [charges against Hartranft] they will be accepted as true by the people. IT WILL NOT DO TO MAKE HARTRANFT OUR CANDIDATE.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

They cannot but express their disapprobation of the looseness of OFFICIAL ROUTINE THAT PLACED IN THE HANDS OF EVANS OVER A MILLION OF DOLLARS OF VALUABLE ASSETS WITHOUT REQUIRING FROM HIM ANY SECURITY WHATEVER.—Hon. Harry White

Evans collected $184,168 34 and retains the whole. STATE OFFICIALS KNEW THIS FACT FOR THREE YEARS BEFORE IT BECAME PUBLIC, AND THE NEGLECT TO REPORT THE TRANSACTION TO THE LEGISLATURE IS REGARDED BY US AS A GROSS DERELICTION OF OFFICIAL DUTY.—Hon. D. N. White.

BEAVER LADIES SEMINARY,

WILL be opened for girls and boys, on the first day of October next. My engagements for the month of September, compel me to postpone the opening of the school to the day named, and I think it better for the pupils.
I have arranged for the accommodation of boys and young men as boarders.
Prof. de Ham will remain in charge of the department of music, and I will have well qualified assistants in every department.

HOLLOWAYS PILLS AND OINTMENT.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PHYSICIAN!

CAUTION.

THE immense demand for HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT, has tempted unprincipled parties to counterfeit these valuable medicines.

In order to protect the public and ourselves, we have issued a new "Trade Mark," consisting of an Egyptian circle of a serpent, with the letter H in the centre. Every box of genuine HOLLOWAY'S PILLS and OINTMENT will have this trade mark on it; none are genuine without it.

DOCTOR PIERCE'S

CURES DISEASES OF THE THROAT, LUNGS, LIVER & BLOOD

In the wonderful medicine to which the afflicted are above pointed for relief, the discoverer believes he has combined in harmony more of Nature's most sovereign curative properties, which God has instilled into the vegetable kingdom for healing the sick, than were ever before combined in one medicine. The evidence of this fact is found in the great variety of most obstinate diseases which it has been found to conquer. In the cure of Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, and the early stages of Consumption, it has astonished the medical faculty, and eminent physicians pronounce it the greatest medical discovery of the age. While it cures the severest coughs, it strengthens the system and purifies the blood. By its great and thorough blood purifying properties, it cures all Humors, from the worst Scrofula to a common Blotch, Pimple, or Eruption. Mercurial disease, Mineral Poisons, and their effects, are eradicated, and vigorous health and a sound constitution established. Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Scaly or Rough Skin, in short, all the numerous diseases caused by bad blood, are conquered by this powerful purifying and invigorating medicine. Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For the relief and cure of all derangements in the stomach, liver, and bowels. They are a mild aperient, and an excellent purgative. Being purely vegetable, they contain no mercury or mineral whatever. Much serious sickness and suffering is prevented by their timely use; and every family should have them on hand for their protection and relief, when required. Long experience has proved them to be the safest, surest, and best of all the Pills with which the market abounds. By their occasional use the blood is purified, the corruptions of the system expelled, obstructions removed, and the whole machinery of life restored to its healthy activity. Internal organs which become clogged and sluggish are cleansed by Ayer's Pills, and stimulated into action. Thus incipient disease is changed into health, the value of which change, when reckoned on the vast multitudes who enjoy it, can hardly be computed. Their sugar coating makes them pleasant to take, and preserves their virtues unimpaired for any length of time, so that they are ever fresh, and perfectly reliable. Although searching, they are mild, and operate without disturbance to the constitution, or diet, or occupation.

Full directions are given on the wrapper to each box, how to use them as a Family Physic, and for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach, and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression, a large dose should be taken, as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

HAIR RENEWER

Every year increases the popularity of this valuable Hair Preparation which is due to merit alone. We can assure our old patrons that it is kept fully up to its high standard; and it is the only reliable and perfected preparation for restoring GRAY OR FADED HAIR to its youthful color, making it soft, lustrous, and silken. The scalp, by its use, becomes white and clean. It removes all eruptions and dandruff, and, by its tonic properties, prevents the hair from falling out, as it stimulates and nourishes the hair-glands. By its use the hair grows thicker and stronger. In baldness, it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, and will create a new growth, except in extreme old age. It is the most economical HAIR DRESSING ever used, as it requires fewer applications, and gives the hair a splendid, glossy appearance. A. A. Hayes, M.D., State Assayer of Massachusetts, says, "The constituents are pure and carefully selected for excellent quality, and I consider it the BEST PREPARATION for its intended purposes." Sold by all Druggists, and Dealers in Medicines.
Price One Dollar.

Buckingham's Dye FOR THE WHISKERS.

As our Renewer in many cases requires too long a time, and too much care, to restore gray or faded Whiskers, we have prepared this dye in one preparation; which will quickly and effectually accomplish this result. It is easily applied, and produces a color which will neither rub nor wash off. Sold by all Druggists. Price Fifty Cents.
